Senate Blocks Move to Limit President on Reorganizing

Wheeler Amendment to Check on Mergers Is Killed, 43-39.

New Plan Pushed To Bar Free Hand

Majority Instead of 2-3 Vote Urged to Stop Consolidation.

By Robert C. Albright.

The most bitterly contested legislative battle since the court plan defeat and the anti-lynching bill filibuster ended yesterday in a 43-to-39 victory for the President in his fight for a free hand in Government reorganization.

But even as the Senate rejected the Wheeler merger limitation by a four-vote margin, a new proposal was advanced by the reorganization bill opposition to permit Congress to stop consolidation orders by a majority vote, instead of a two-thirds ballot.

Stronger Senate support was claimed for the latest limiting proposal, put forward by Senators Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa; Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, and Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado (Democrats).

Could Show Disapproval.

Like the Administration bill, it would permit the President's reorganization orders to become law after 60 days, unless Congress specifically disapproved. But under the Gillette-Brown-Johnson amendment, disapproval would be expressed by "concurrent resolution" not requiring Presidential signature. This would obviate possibility of a veto.

The Wheeler amendment defeated yesterday would have required specific Congressional approval of the President's merger and transfer orders before they took effect. A switch of three Senators the other way would have approved the amendment. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, charged private "assurances" given Senators by the Administration defeated his plan.

A day thick with charges and countercharges of "lobbying" for and against the bill brought forth the following other developments:

The Senate Lobby Committee, headed by Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, examined Dr. Edward A. Rumely, secretary of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government, on activities against the bill. Dr. Rumely refused "on ad-

3 New U. S. Judges Approved for D.C.

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday aproved a report of its sub-committee recommending three additional Federal justices for the District.

The sub-committee, headed by Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, recommended two additional judges for the United States District Court and one more justice for the Court of Appeals.

'Contumacy' Charged To TVA's Chairman

President, Again Defied at Hearing, Gives A. E. Morgan Until Monday to Support Charges With Facts; Wants 'Yes' or 'No' Answer.

Partial Transcript—Page 7.

By Sidney Olson.

Charged by the President with "contumacy," Chairman Arthur E Morgan, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, must decide by 1:30 p. m. Monday whether he will co-operate in the President's fact-finding inquiry into the directors' quarrel that has cracked open the TVA.

President Roosevelt set the deadline yesterday after the chairman again had persisted in his stubborn refusal to produce facts to back up his repeated charges that the other TVA directors, David E. Lilienthal and Harcourt A. Morgan, were guilty of dishonesty, malfeasance and bad faith.

The President asked Chairman Morgan to answer simply "yes or no" by Monday to the question whether he would co-operate in the Presidential investigation.

The President bore down hard on the 60-year-old chairman after an exhaustive two-hour attempt to get facts from him, or even direct answers. The President said:

"On the face of the record as it stands today the charges of the other directors, that Chairman Morgan has obstructed and sabotaged the work of the Tennessee Valley Authority, must be accepted as true. Chairman Morgan having refused to offer testimony in denial of the charges.

"On the record as it stands today Chairman Morgan has shown by his refusal to answer questions relating to any facts which he may have relied on at the time of making charges of dishonesty and want of integrity against his fellow-directors, that, on the record as it stands today—he is guilty of contumacy in his refusal.

"Therefore, as the case stands today, no further evidence can be brought out today because of the attitude of Chairman Morgan, and,

Wardman Dies; Made and Lost Riches in Realty

Englishman Who Became D. C. Building Leader Was 65.

Harry Wardman, English immigrant who stretched a shoestring into millions in Washington real estate, died last night at 9:25 o'clock at his home, 2433 Massachusetts avenue northwest. He was 65 years old and had been ill several months.

Wardman's spectacular rise to prominence as a builder and developer and, in fact, his presence in Washington and even in the United States was the result of a mistake in his early youth. Barely more than 20, he used to dream in his home in Bradford, Yorkshire, where he was born April 11, 1872, of Australia and its promise to the adventurous.

He started there but boarded the wrong boat and had to work his way to New York, where he landed with 7 shillings in his pocket.

Thirty-five years later Wardman was the colossus of Washington real estate. The hotels and apartments and more than 9,000 houses built by him housed one out of ten Washington residents. Assets of the firm he

U.S. Bank Official Threatens Critic With Prosecution

By the United Press.

The Federal Government last night threatened to prosecute Henry Sherman, Cleveland (Ohio) banker, for his statement before the Indiana State meeting of the American Bankers Association that operations of Federal savings and loan associations were unsound and a threat to the Nation's banking structure.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, attacked as "untrue, malicious and unwarranted" the statement he said Sherman "does not deny." Sherman made his attack at the bankers' meeting in Indianapolis yesterday.

FCC Will Make Broad Inquiry Into U. S. Radio

'Monopoly Trend' Will Be Weighed by Entire Commission.

By the United Press.

The Federal Communications Commission voted yesterday to investigate "monopolistic tendencies" and other social and economic aspects of the billion-dollar radio broadcasting industry.

The order for the inquiry, listing 13 objectives, was introduced by Chairman Frank McNinch and accepted by a 6-to-1 vote. A similar resolution proposed by Commissioner T. A. M. Craven was not acted upon.

The investigation will go into practices or agreements in restraint of trade or furtherance of monopoly in connection with chain broadcasting, as well as a thorough study of the competitive practices of chain stations compared with the independents.

Inquiry to Start at Once.

The dissenting vote was cast by Commissioner George Henry Payne, who said he favored such an investigation but believed Craven's resolution was more "comprehensive and calculated to be more effective."

Craven proposed an inquiry by three commissioners not previously connected with the agency's broadcasting division, thus restricting it to himself, Payne and Robert A. Walker.

The investigation, participated in

Son James Delays Mass. Race Reply

By the Associated Press

James Roosevelt, asked to run for Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts in the September primary, told a Bay State delegation yesterday he would require "a few weeks" before giving "a final reply."

Men Freed From D. C. Prisons Lack Cash to Live, Is Protest

Prisoners are being released from District penal institutions with not enough money to tide them over a week-end and are providing a serious problem for parole and rehabilitation organizations, the Board of Public Welfare was told yesterday by representatives from numerous local civic and welfare groups.

For several years previous to last September the order was that prisoners who had served six months or more would receive $10 or more upon their release, with the top limit set at $20.

Today, it was charged, the men are getting as little as $2 or $2.50 each and this amount is supposed to stake them until parole officers or welfare agencies can find jobs and homes for them.

With welfare agency budgets in the District too low to accommodate any increase at all, the men often find their way back to Police Headquarters, it was charged.

The decreased gratuity order was placed by Ray Huff, general superintendent of penal institutions, The Bureau of Rehabilitation, the Criminal Justice Association, the Parole Board and various civic and welfare

Prague Bill Prorates All Official Jobs

Would Mean 100 Pct. Germanic Rule in Sudeten Area.

But May Fail to Satisfy Nazis Asking Control of Minority.

By the United Press.

Prague, March 18.—The Czechoslovakian government, faced with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's threats, announced tonight that it is arranging to give the country's restricted German minority a voice in the government.

A bill will be introduced in Parliament giving the country's 3,500,000 Germans, including the militant Sudeten Deutsch Party under the Nazi leadership of Konrad Henlein, representation in national and local governments on a proportionate basis.

Although the government's move was expected to ease somewhat the tension between Germany and Czechoslovakia, due to Hitler's demands for the "political freedom" of the Sudetens in the mountainous western region bordering Germany, it was evident that Henlein and his followers would not be satisfied.

Party Demands More.

The Sudeten Deutsch Party, which won more than two-thirds of the German vote in Czechoslovakia to its Nazi standard in the 1935 elections, demands that it be recognized as "the sole representative of German elements in Czechoslovakia."

Henlein, and his Nazi supporters in Germany, were expected to oppose grouping of the Sudetens with such anti-Nazi German parties as the German Social Democrats and German Agrarians in picking representatives for government posts under the government's proposed bill.

Thus far only the general principles of the bill have been revealed and it was not disclosed how the German officials would be chosen or in what way they would administer the country's German regions.

New Hitler Threat.

For this reason the Sudetens, whose political activities have been virtually suppressed, were wary of the announcement.

Hitler, in his February 20 speech before the Reichstag in Berlin, announced that he would defend the "political freedom" of 10,000,000 Germans living beyond the Reich's frontiers—in Austria and Czechoslovakia. He repeated this in his Reichstag speech in Berlin tonight, but it no longer referred to Austria, which is now a German province.

The bill stipulates that the German minority, mostly in Bohemia or the western part of Czechoslovakia that has been rimmed on three sides by German troops during the last week, will have officials in every branch of administration.

Proportional Basis.

The number of German representatives will be in proportion to the Germans living within the jurisdiction of each administrative branch.

Thus, in the national government of Czechoslovakia the Germans will be entitled to 22 per cent of the positions because they form 22 per cent of the nation's population.

The same principle would be applied in provinces, districts and municipalities.

In Prague, for example, there would be 33 per cent German officials and in the western district of Egen nearly 100 per cent.

Krylenko Arrest Hinted in Moscow

Moscow, March 18 (AP).—The arrest of Nikolai Vassilevitch Krylenko, former commissar of justice, was indicated today by the publication of "wrecking" accusations against him. Krylenko was dismissed January 17, charged with paying more attention to chess and mountain climbing than to his ministry.

"Bezbozhnik," the official Atheist magazine, indicated that the Metropolitan Theophan Tulskoff of Gorky and an undisclosed number of other clergymen had been found guilty of spying and terrorism and had been executed.

Austria's Fate Only a Sample, Fuehrer Warns

Dissolves Reichstag, Asks Four More Years to Consolidate Germans.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 18.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler tonight held up Austria's fate as an implied warning to Czechoslovakia.

He asked the Reichstag at its farewell meeting for "another four years that I may complete the tasks ahead in the greater Reich."

Before Hitler began his 38-minute speech, Field Marshal Goering, as president of the Reichstag, announced dissolution of that body and called legislative elections for the new Pan-Germany for April 10.

That is the date of the plebiscite for Austria to give approval of her absorption by Germany.

Hitler thanked Premier Mussolini again for his approval of the Austrian conquest and pledged:

"Italy's frontiers remain for us inviolate. Behind this word stands the German nation."

He pitied "the democracies" because they did not understand his move into Germany's southern neighbor, a state which he said was "based upon a stark violation of the right of self-determination of the 6,500,000 people of German nationality."

The German leader stood before a cheering Reichstag which included for the first time on its government

U. S. to Work for Peace, Avoid Entanglements, Kennedy Says

New Envoy Warns Britain Not to Count on Armed Aid; Praises Trade Pacts, Asserts Friendship With All Nations.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 18.—The United States is willing to join a peace program, Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy said today, but he warned Britain not to presume too much on American participation in foreign affairs.

"My country," he asserted, "would be glad to join and encourage any nation or group of nations in a peace program based on economic recovery, limitation of armaments and a revival of the sanctity of international commitments."

On the other hand, "the great majority of Americans oppose any entangling alliances," he said.

The speech—the first public one the new Ambassador has made on British soil—was delivered to the Pilgrims Club.

He told the British that, because there was no possibility of war between the two peoples, they could speak frankly with each other.

He cited what he called two mistaken conceptions of America frequently held abroad:

Hoover Doubts War Is Probable 'Soon'

Rebels Thrust Wedge Deeper Into Foes' Land

Franco's Motor Columns Approaching Boundary of Catalonia.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier), March 18.—Spanish insurgents hammered their wedge deeper into government-held territory today in their drive to the Mediterranean Seaboard.

Motorized columns were reported approaching Maella, 5 miles from the boundaries of Catalonia.

Maella is the junction point of a highway connecting Caspe, which the insurgents captured yesterday, with the main route between Alcaniz and Gandesa.

Gandesa, next main center in the path of the seaboard drive, is only 20 miles airline from the Mediterranean, though blocked off from it by mountains which would force the invading army to take a longer sweep.

The insurgents announced 2,000 government fighters, most of whom were foreign volunteers, were killed in the fall of Caspe.

An official report of casualties in Barcelona, attacked by insurgent bombers in a wave of raids which began Wednesday night and continued today, placed the total dead at 600 and the wounded at 1,200.

Reports reaching Cerbere from Spain said a freighter flying the British flag ran aground in flames near the Spanish port of Llansa.

All Oil Companies in Mexico Taken Over by Government

By the United Press.

Mexico City, March 18.—President Lazaro Cardenas tonight expropriated all Mexican oil companies in a move to halt the bitter controversy between 17 American and other foreign companies and their workers.

The President announced the expropriation in a nation-wide broadcast after a lengthy cabinet meeting in which he said that "the government is even ready to change the present rate of exchange to meet conditions which might arise from the expropriation."

At the same time, the Bank of Mexico announced that it was suspending dealings in foreign exchange until it was "deemed advisable" to resume it.

Cardenas said that the condition arising from the companies' defiance of a Supreme Court ruling resulting in a workers' petition for termination of contracts, was so serious that the government was forced to act swiftly.

Therefore, he continued, he was applying the Mexican expropriation

Warsaw Deal For Reich to Take Danzig Is Reported

Fuehrer May Seize on Memel to Trade for Corridor.

Baltic Ultimatum Gets Reply Today

Lack of Soviet Aid Is Expected to Force Surrender.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, Poland, March 18.—Poland today made ready for war with Lithuania, as Europe watched in fear of widespread territorial rearrangements.

Peace depended on Lithuania's acceptance of a Polish ultimatum that will expire at 3 p. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow. One Lithuanian offer already has been rejected.

Poland, with an army thirteen times the size of Lithuania's, moved troops close to the border throughout the day. Her preparations were said to be complete.

Troops Move All Day.

Poland's strong man, Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, returned late tonight from Wilno, center of Polish troop concentrations.

He was met by the cabinet amid great pomp.

While Polish army authorities were extremely reluctant to give out military information, it was disclosed that reinforcements had been arriving at Wilno and vicinity since morning.

Authoritative reports in Berlin said Germany had agreed to keep hands off if Poland would acquiesce to Germany's seizure of the free City of Danzig.

Reich May Take Memel.

The possibility also was raised that hostilities might lead to German annexation of Memel, a former German city and now a Lithuanian port, and the Polish corridor.

All three are territories that Germany lost after the World War and that contain minorities over whom Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has proclaimed himself protector.

Poland demanded that Lithuania renounce any claim to Wilno, her historic capital, and re-establish relations with Poland that have been broken for 18 years.

[In Berlin well-informed Polish sources said Lithuania is ready to bow to the Warsaw government's demands, the United Press reported. The Lithuanian government's decision will not be announced, however, until the deadline on the ultimatum expires, it was said.

[German quarters believed that Lithuania's decision to swallow Poland's "bitter pill" might be due to Soviet Russia's reluctance to come to her aid because of preoccupation with Russian internal troubles.—Editor's note.]

Relations Long Broken.

There has been no exchange of diplomats and no traffic, either rail or air, between the neighbors since Poland seized Wilno and about one-third of Lithuania's territory, October 9, 1920.

This issue flared up anew over the killing of a Polish guard, March 11, on the frontier, which Lithuania insists merely is a demarcation line.

The situation was watched with particular interest by Soviet Russia and the little Baltic states to the north—Latvia and Estonia—

Leaders Pledge Business Tax Aid in Month

Barkley Says Senate Will Soon Enact Bill 'of Very Material Benefit.'

Substantial tax relief for business within a month was forecast yesterday by Administration leaders, as the Senate Finance Committee prepared to close hearings today on a record replete with industrial appeals for lighter levies.

A score of lawyers and business representatives outlined inequalities under the present tax laws, criticized provisions of the House tax bill and urged Congress not to try "to pass an unreasonable tax law and enforce it by rough treatment of non-compliers."

Meanwhile, Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, proposed a tax bill rider calling for processing taxes or "tariff equalization fees" on six basic farm commodities to provide $212,000,000 in additional revenue for "parity" payments to farmers promised in the farm bill.

Hull Protests Excise.

Both Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace wrote letters to Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, condemning excise taxes on imported pork and imported pork products proposed in the House tax bill.

Hull said enactment of such a pork tariff would be an attempt at economic suicide.

"There is no more dangerous game than an embargo policy in foreign trade," said Hull. "It can be played by everybody, with suicidal results for all."

Wallace wrote Harrison that the House excise rates on imported pork would "constitute a virtual embargo." Wallace said "the problem is not one of keeping out imports but of finding foreign outlets for our surplus supplies."

Quick Action Seen.

Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, on the Senate floor, said a tax bill would be enacted within 30 days "which will be of very material benefit to business." House leaders said the tax bill passed by the House would "encourage business." Barkley, member of the finance committee, is expected to defend the central House bill business tax provisions, as opposed to the modified flat rates favored by Chairman Harrison.

Barkley's forecast of "a very substantial moderation of tax laws" came in response to a statement by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, that Federal taxes "have discouraged business men as I have never seen business men discouraged before."

Borah Opposes Move.

Opposition to proposed lowering of exemptions to reach into the lower income tax brackets was voiced on the floor by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho.

"What they are proposing to do is to place more and more of the burden of government on the low income classes," said Borah. "They are proposing to repeal the taxes which are said to be a burden on business and place them on those less able to pay."

Harrison has proposed scaling down highest individual income surtaxes from 75 to 60 per cent, while Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, has proposed lowering the income tax base.

"Priceless Habit" Cited.

At Senate Finance Committee hearings, Chairman Robert N. Miller, of the American Bar Association's committee on Federal taxation, told Senators that 85 per cent of all tax collections in the last ten years "have come in automatically through the co-operation of taxpayers" and the remaining 15 per cent has been collected by deficiency letters or suits.

Miller warned the committee not to "impair this priceless habit of tax compliance which the Government profits by."

"No government can enforce any of its laws, no matter how great its technical powers, unless they are supported by public opinion among those who are subject to them," said Miller.

"Dealing at arm's length with a very small percentage of non-complying taxpayers is relatively easy; but to collect by force from any large body of taxpayers is a very different thing, and we do not know of any government that for any substantial length of time has been able to get its main revenues by that means."

Deflation Seen in Tax.

M. L. Seidman, of the New York Board of Trade, testified that "taxation is undoubtedly the most decisive deflationary influence in our capital economy today," and that "many of our troubles can be traced directly to faulty and oppressive taxes." Seidman said the country was in a "synthetic depression, a managed economy depression."

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, asked the committee to eliminate levies on trading in commodity futures. Tumulty, who spoke for the Chicago Board of Trade, said the levies provided "a deadly burden" on both commodity traders and farmers.

H. Boardman Spalding, chairman of the government finance committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, urged greater relief for smaller corporations, complete repeal of the undivided profits tax, and a low flat rate on capital gains. He asked the committee to follow the tax bill with a study and overhaul of the tax structure to "allay present anxieties of business."

Professor Yandell Henderson, of Yale University, said the liquor tax should be raised from $2 to $3 a gallon, instead of the 25-cent increase proposed by the House. He said the bootlegger threat was a mere "bogey" and "there is ample profiteering in the liquor industry to enable them to pay this tax."

Clinton Davidson, of Fiduciary Council, Inc., N. Y., said abolition of the "exorbitant" taxes on personal holding and investment companies would break the jam now freezing more than $5,000,000,000 worth of investment capital.

Politics and People

Staggering Relief Costs Branded Threat to Solvency of American Municipalities.

By Franklyn Waltman

With governments tottering and dictators running berserk throughout the world; with TVA and Bituminous Coal Commission circuses at home; with all hope of a balanced Federal budget gone glimmering for at least several years, and with men's minds greatly disturbed about the future of their jobs and livelihood, it is perhaps natural that the issues raised by governmental relief of unemployment now do not stir the interest they did a few months ago.

WALTMAN.

Nevertheless, relief remains the foremost problem of the country. It is at the bottom of the unbalanced budget, and that is at the bottom of several other problems of magnitude. Moreover, it remains a problem which has been handled in a sort of hand-to-mouth fashion, without any progress toward a definite and permanent solution. Indeed, it is one problem about which little—comparatively very little—is known.

It is for these reasons that the testimony of Carl P. Herbert, director of the St. Paul (Minn.) Bureau of Municipal Research, on behalf of himself and 17 other municipal research directors, before the Byrnes Special Committee of the Senate investigating relief and unemployment, is of the foremost importance. What Mr. Herbert told that committee constitutes by all odds the most startling development of the day in Washington.

In discussions of the relief problem in recent years, the emphasis has been placed almost entirely on its Federal aspects. It has been pointed out that since 1933 the Treasury has disbursed more than $13,000,000,000, seeking to relieve the destitution of the jobless. We know that in the fiscal year 1937—a good year from the viewpoint of prosperity and recovery—the Treasury spent $2,466,000,000 for relief—more than in either of the two previous years; that in this fiscal year more than $2,000,000,000 has been appropriated for this purpose, and that Heaven only can tell the requirements for the next fiscal year.

We know what all this has done to the Federal Government. But we did not know the impact of the Federal relief policy on municipalities until yesterday—and then we learned only in part. The Herbert group of municipal research directors concededly have only scratched the surface. They undertook to ascertain the trend of the problem from the municipal viewpoint by sampling the situation in representative cities in different sections of the country. It is a job the Byrnes committee should continue.

On the basis of what the Herbert group found they concluded, as a "stark reality," that the "temporarily painless method of financing relief so largely on a basis of emergency borrowing is certain to produce calamitous financial repercussions in our American cities at no remote future." The situation found by them, they assert, "is frankly one which portends insolvency, if the tendency is allowed to continue uncorrected." In still another conclusion they assert that "our relief expenditures have grown so much that many of our local governmental services are being imperiled" and they add that "unless steps are taken to bring these expenditures within the ability of our people to pay, we will find shortly that it will be necessary to reduce drastically the funds provided for schools and other local functions of government." Indeed, they found this already would be necessary in many communities "if the cost of relief were not being deferred in large part through borrowing."

On what facts are such conclusions based? In the first place, this group characterized as "startling" the difficulty of attempting to ascertain the total sum spent for relief and welfare in most of our cities due to the diversity of the sources of money—Federal, State and local—and to the confusion and division of accounting authority and the absence of competent records.

They succeeded, however, in getting a general picture in eight representative cities. Yet even as to these cities, their report states that "no director was able to bring together all of the costs for his city." They found that with one exception, the per capita cost of work relief and old-age assistance in the cities surveyed in 1923 was less than 50 cents out of "a total per capita cost for all municipal activities averaging from $38 to $40." The report added: "In 1936 the per capita expenditure for these phases of relief in these cities ranged from $23.88 to as much as $38.54, approaching, in many cases the amount spent for all governmental activities in 1923."

The Herbert group assembled for eight cities—ranging in size from Boston to St. Paul—total ascertainable costs of all welfare activities in those cities, irrespective of whether money was supplied by Federal, State or local governments or by private donors through Community Chests. Their figures included institutionalization of unfortunates, aid to mothers and children, and State and local aid to veterans, as well as direct and work relief, but did not include any figure for CCC camps, National Youth Administration work, Federal aid to veterans, and similar unascertainable items.

As a yardstick against these figures the group placed total tax collections for 1936 for each of the cities. The results were startling. The total ascertainable costs of welfare in Boston were equal to approximately two-thirds of the city's tax collections. In Cincinnati they were approximately $3,000,000 more than the collections. In Indianapolis the costs were almost three-fourths of the collections. In Milwaukee they were five-sixths. In Minneapolis they were almost nine-tenths. In St. Louis they were more than seven-tenths.

As an example, the total ascertainable cost of welfare in 1936 in St. Paul was $14,349,113—and Mr. Herbert regards that figure as a minimum. In 1936 St. Paul's tax collections totaled $14,242,171, or less than the welfare costs. Of the figure spent, $11,540,916 was the cost of direct and work-relief and old-age assistance. Where did St. Paul get the money? The Federal Government supplied 58.3 per cent of it. The State of Minnesota supplied 13.5 per cent and 28.2 per cent was put up locally.

Where did these agencies get the money? The answer points up the entire picture. Of the sum supplied by St. Paul $1,302,000 was borrowed by the municipality. Of the amount put up by Minnesota, $1,706,000 was borrowed by the State, and, as our national budget shows, all of the $8,371,000 Federal share was borrowed by the Treasury. Thus, out of $14,349,113 disbursed by St. Paul in 1936 for relief and welfare purposes, $11,379,000 was borrowed money!

This illustrates the point which Mr. Herbert and his associates made. Irrespective of the merits of relief programs, what is now being done is being done with borrowed money. Add to that fact the finding of his group that "a regime of high relief costs has become practically permanent regardless of economic conditions," and even a child would know that there must be an explosion somewhere.

vice of counsel" to turn over his organization's files for a committee "fishing expedition."

Senator Wheeler charged on the floor that Minton's committee was conducting a "kangaroo court" in order "to browbeat people just because of the fact that they are opposed to this legislation." Wheeler said Administration officials accused of lobbying for the bill should be called before the lobby committee.

Mrs. Longworth Mentioned.

Senator Minton retaliated by declaring Wheeler dined in the Senate restaurant with "the social lobby," as it should be called. Wheeler retorted he was invited to lunch by Alice Longworth, daughter of former President Roosevelt, and was not ashamed of it, but the reorganization bill was not discussed.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, demanded that economy be incorporated with efficiency as one of the reorganization bill's objectives. He advanced an amendment declaring a 10 per cent cut in ordinary costs of Government to be an objective of the bill. Byrd declared the Federal Government alone "is now exacting 10 per cent out of our national income."

Termination of the reorganization bill fight next mid-week was presaged, as Senate Majority Leader Barkley obtained unanimous consent to limit the debate on the bill and all amendments.

Three Controversies.

Three sharp controversies remained in the measure—the proposed Byrd 10 per cent expenditure slash; the Gillette-Brown-Johnson proposal to give Congress a stronger check on mergers, and the Administration proposal to turn current accounting over the Budget Bureau and set up a new auditor general with authority only to make a post audit after Federal money was spent.

Color highlight of the day was Senator Wheeler's caustic floor brush with Senator Minton, following the Lobby Committee's examination only of lobbying against the bill.

"If we are going to have a kangaroo court," said Wheeler, "that is going to take people before it and browbeat them just because of the fact that they are opposed to this legislation, then we ought to go the limit, and we ought to call each and everyone of these people down who have expressed an opinion one way or the other."

"Would the Senator include the social lobby?" asked Minton.

"I do not know them," said Wheeler.

"Well, I saw the Senator dining with it down here in the restaurant of the Senate," replied Minton. "If the Senator will furnish me with the list, I will subpena them."

"What silly nonsense," retorted Wheeler. "To show Senators the type of mind that is speaking, I will say that I had lunch, yes, with Alice Roosevelt Longworth, and I am proud of the fact that she asked me to go to lunch. Is there any Senator here who would refuse to have lunch with her and her friends and a newspaper man in the Senate restaurant? . . . She never mentioned this bill in any shape or form with me. That is the social lobby! Talk about seeing things!"

Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, said the party Minton held at the Mayflower for Paul V. McNutt, Philippine Commissioner, should be included in the "social lobby." Holt asked how the McNutt party was financed.

"That was a social lobby, certainly," said Wheeler. "I am told, however, that most of those who were invited did not come, and those who went to it crashed the gate."

"Candidacy" Not Pertinent.

Minton sought to tell how the party for the former Indiana Governor was financed, but Wheeler declined to yield "to anyone to go into the candidacy of Mr. McNutt," in which he said he was not interested.

Minton asked if he was interested in "Wheeler's" candidacy.

"No, I am not interested in mine, I am not a candidate and I am not interested in the Senator's, either."

"That is fair enough," said Minton.

"So I am not interested in anybody's candidacy," continued Wheeler. "When I am interested in somebody else's candidacy I will have the courage to stand up and say in whose candidacy I am interested, just exactly the same as I stood on the floor of the Senate and said I was interested in the candidacy of Mr. Roosevelt when there was nobody here on the floor excepting three members of the Senate, that I know, that had any interest in it. And when I am interested in it I will not be giving big dinners, and I will not be flying from Manila to the United States in order to get a lot of cheap advertising."

At the lobby committee inquiry that brought on the Wheeler-Minton clash, Dr. Rumely refused to turn over all the files of the national committee to uphold constitutional government. Rumely said that if the Minton group would subpena "any specific thing," giving the date, addressee, signature and content of letters, he would supply such documents.

Say 'Yes' or 'No,' Roosevelt Tells TVA Chairman

TVA

secondly, on the evidence which has been presented, and on the refusal to submit evidence on the part of Chairman Morgan, some action must be taken in the public interest."

Resignation Hinted.

The latter phrase was taken as an indication that on Monday, should the chairman persist in refusing to co-operate, the President would demand his resignation.

"Contumacy," as defined in the dictionary, means pertinacious resistance to authority, and specifically, willful contempt of court.

Yesterday the President repeatedly outlined the basis for his investigation as resting on his responsibility as head of the Government, and particularly on the special clause in the TVA act, section 17, which empowers the President to make any investigation he may deem proper to ascertain whether in the management of any property owned by the Government in the Tennessee Valley Basin there has been undue or unfair advantage given to private persons or corporations by any officials of the Government, and whether the Government has been thereby injured.

Holds Press Conference.

Chairman Morgan insisted that this clause in the TVA act applied only to the use of Government property at Muscle Shoals. This was his reply when asked by reporters, at a press conference he held at 4 p. m. in the lobby of the Washington Hotel, if the word "property" in Government usage did not usually imply "the best services of its employes."

Chairman Morgan appeared at yesterday's 11 a. m. conference with another statement, in lieu of factual evidence to substantiate his numerous charges, and asked the President's permission to read the statement instead of answering questions.

The President, after stating that he would be "forced to interrupt" if the chairman did not confine himself to facts, repeatedly interrupted the reading of the four-page statement with demands for proof, asking such questions as: "What do you base that on?" and "What facts are you referring to?" and "Bad faith by whom?" and "Are you prepared to produce such witnesses?"

Chairman Left Trembling.

The chairman, who emerged trembling, red-faced and very nervous after the two-hour session, only once throughout the session gave a direct and simple answer, according to the transcript. This answer came during a detailed discussion of the Berry marble case, in which Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), of Tennessee, sought $5,000,000 damages from the Government for "damages" to his marble lands, inundated by TVA dams. (The claims were adjudged worthless.)

The verbal duel is quoted below:

"The President: Am I right in summing up the situation at the time of the refusal of Senator Berry to answer the questions of the board in saying that the members of the board at that time had a right to have grave suspicion of the good faith of the claimants, but no legal proof at that time?

"Mr. Lilienthal: That is correct, and that is what counsel advised us.

"The President: Chairman Morgan, do you agree that at that time there was grave suspicion because of his refusal to answer?

"Chairman Morgan: I am not taking part in this inquiry into the facts.

"The President: Do you decline to answer that question which specifies a time and specific request as to whether that constituted suspicion? (long pause). Did you hear the question?

"Chairman Morgan: I would like to have that question read by the reporter. (The last question was then read.)

"Chairman Morgan: I would like to have the President's previous question read also. (The previous question was then read.)

"Chairman Morgan: I prepared this statement solely as an illustration of what I considered had a place in this type of inquiry.

"The President: In your statement of the illustration you have charged, Chairman Morgan, that there was proof on a certain date of bad faith on the part of these claimants. I had asked you whether, at that time, the refusal of Senator Berry to answer gave ground for suspicion of bad faith on the part of the claimants."

(Long pause.)

"Chairman Morgan: Yes."

It was after a series of such attempts to get factual, direct answers from the chairman that the President, in evident desperation, said bluntly:

"At the present moment I am up against a stone wall. The stone wall of your refusal to give me any facts in support of the many general allegations of dishonesty, lack of integrity and malfeasance in office, on which I have questioned you, both last Friday and today."

The chairman had come to the conference with the determination to insist once more on a Congressional inquiry as the "proper place" to vent his charges. Apparently upset by the President's insistence on his own power and duty to investigate the situation, the chairman fell back on answers indicating that his statement covered his position.

The President asked him numerous times if he would be willing to answer questions under a Presidential inquiry. Morgan replied that such an inquiry would be restricted to "certain very limited subjects," as he sought to indicate any inquiry ought to range through the entire realm of governmental policy, while the President, contrarily, sought to narrow the issue to factual proof or disproof of the charges each side has made. The President said:

"Grave Public Concern."

"Chairman Morgan, that question is of such utter simplicity, so clear, a question merely asking whether you are willing to proceed with this inquiry, either under my general powers or under the TVA act, that I cannot conceivably imagine why longer consideration is necessary." (Chairman Morgan had indicated that even two weeks' time might be insufficient to allow him to make up his mind to answer yes or no.)

"A matter of grave public concern confronts both of us. I have a duty to perform. I have asked you to co-operate with me in performance of that duty.

"I regret, but I think, it now being half-past 1 on Friday, I can give you only until Monday at 1:30 p. m. to answer that question."

Chairman Morgan answered:

"I also have a grave public responsibility. The question does not seem simple to me. It is my full intent to do my full duty under the TVA act and under the United States Government."

In Morgan's statement he had given, as an illustration of why he believed the sessions "not useful nor fact-finding occasions," his views on the question of whether Senator Berry had acted in bad faith in the marble claims, stressing this point as "evidence" that the Berry claims were positively proved to be made in bad faith as early as February 25, 1937. He charged that his fellow directors were at that time fully aware of Senator Berry's "bad faith" in the claims.

Lilienthal, in rebuttal, answered each charge with a series of documented statements.

Chairman Morgan, at his press conference, while refusing to answer most questions, said when asked if he would resign:

"Rumors to that effect have been current for about four years, and I know the source and incentive of them. I have no other comment."

House Committee Sets Hearings March 30 on $300,000,000 Flood Control Program.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Whittington said the committee would draft legislation to authorize priority projects. Hearings were scheduled for March 30.

A comprehensive program recommended last year by the Army engineers, to cost $800,000,000, was pigeonholed by the Flood Control Committee on President Roosevelt's request.

Congressional sources said President Roosevelt sent a letter to Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, objecting to efforts to block transfer of three Panama Pacific liners from intercoastal trade to South American routes.

The House Merchant Marine Committee, overriding plans of the Maritime Commission to make the transfer, unanimously adopted a resolution last Wednesday, directing the commission to continue Government operation of the liners in intercoastal trade until July, 1940. A similar resolution by McAdoo was defeated by a tie vote in a Senate committee.

'Right of Way' Still a Puzzle To D.C. Drivers

'Beat the Other Fellow' the Watchword, Despite Traffic Laws.

(How well are District traffic regulations observed by the average motorist? How well are the regulations enforced by police? To answer these questions, The Post sent its traffic reporter on a cruising observation assignment. In today's story—last of a series—stress is laid on the law pertaining to right of way. Editor's note.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Who has the right of way? It's an old, old question, but Washington motorists apparently haven't found the answer.

Throwing caution to the winds, drivers on downtown streets yesterday seemed to have but one idea in mind—beat the "other fellow."

They were not alone in their chance-taking game, however. Careless pedestrians appeared to delight in stepping from the curb into a path of oncoming cars. Signal lights meant nothing to them.

Deaths Often Result.

At Jackson place and H street northwest, an elderly man virtually took his life in his hands by stepping into the street against traffic and holding up his hand for vehicles to stop. An accident was narrowly averted when one motorist swung wide to avoid him.

At the uncontrolled intersection of Thirteen and a Half and E streets another driver sped past a line of moving traffic and plowed through a line of pedestrians crossing at a crosswalk. At least two persons escaped his charge by leaping to safety.

The right-of-way law is one of the police department's greatest problems. Following an accident, it is a difficult task to determine who was right and who was wrong unless distinterested witnesses are available.

Frequently it makes little difference who had the right-of-way. A morgue slab is the same regardless of who was to blame.

Law Orders Slowing Up.

It was evident yesterday that few drivers know a section of the traffic regulations which reads:

"A vehicle approaching an intersection shall slow down and be kept under such control as to avoid colliding with pedestrians or vehicles."

At numerous corners not controlled by lights, motorists were observed speeding across dangerous intersections without glancing either to the right or left.

A light delivery truck entered Chevy Chase Circle at a rapid rate of speed. Approaching cars jammed on their brakes. The truck careened wildly around a nurse-maid pushing a baby carriage and continued on its reckless way.

Pedestrians, the law says, are entitled to the right of way at all uncontrolled corners—providing they are crossing on a crosswalk. They have also the preference while crossing on a green signal.

Other Rules Provided.

As to the right of way between vehicles at uncontrolled intersections, the law says:

"The driver of a vehicle approaching an intersection shall yield the right of way to a vehicle which has entered the intersection. When two vehicles enter an intersections at the same time, the driver of the vehicle on the left shall yield to the driver on the right."

In many instances yesterday long lines of "through-traffic" cars were stalled at corners while vehicles making left turns refused to yield. In this particular, the law reads:

"The driver of a vehicle within an intersection intending to turn to the left, shall yield to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is within the intersection or so close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard."

Motoring manners, said Inspec- William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor, play an important part in the District's efforts to reduce accidents.

An orchestra composed of members of the Senior and Junior High School Orchestras, trained by Capt. Don Paul McAdoo and members of Dr. E. N. C. Barnes' instrumental corps of the public schools, will play.

Central Art Pupil Wins Prize of $10

Jay Waters Grigsby, art student at Central High School, yesterday was awarded the $10 first prize for drawing a seal for the District of Columbia Society for Prevention of Blindness. Sandra Rogers, of Eastern High School, won second prize of $5. Honorable mention prizes of $2.50 each were presented to four other Eastern students. Robert Clark, June Deadrick, Claudia Mallard and Neita Sparkman.

Presentation of the awards was by Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, president, at the society's headquarters at 839 Seventeenth street northwest.

The committee which selected the winning seal which will be used on all society literature included Mrs. Allen L. Vories, first vice president, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Dr. Benjamin Rones and Miss Leila Mechlin.

Big Railroads To Ask Unions To Take Pay Cut

Committee Named to Meet With Spokesmen for 1,000,000 Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 18.—The Nation's major railroads decided today to ask their employes to consider wage reductions.

The Association of American Railroads, embracing 140 class-one lines, appointed a committee to meet with spokesmen for the 21 Brotherhoods, representing the bulk of between 950,000 and 1,000,000 workers.

The stated purpose of the projected parley was a discussion of the "whole situation in the railroad industry to see if we can get together on remedies to meet the problem created by the disappointing decision in the rate case."

J. J. Pelley, president of the association, said the conference probably would be held next week in Washington.

"There was nothing said about a specific reduction," he added. "It all depends upon the outcome of the conference."

Robert S. Henry, his assistant, said the prime topic would be wages, because it could be considered quickly.

"Other things that have been discussed to help the railroads, such as consolidations, would require legislation and more time," he said. "However, the conference is broad enough to cover anything that the management and the brotherhoods might want to discuss."

Contracts at Stake.

A spokesman for the Association opened negotiations on the contracts drafted by the carriers and their union employes last year could be reopened.

The brotherhoods obtained wage increases estimated at $135,000,000 a year in negotiations last Summer and Fall.

Recently, the I. C. C. granted freight rate increases calculated by the carriers at approximately five per cent. The railroads termed this "entirely inadequate" in the light of higher operating costs and dwindling revenue.

After naming representatives of Eastern, Southern and Western roads to the conference committee, Pelley announced he would telegraph an invitation to the proposed parley to George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Labor Executives Committee.

"We are not heading for Government control," Pelley said. "There would be no occasion for that unless there was a breakdown in service, and service is better than ever."

U. S. Weighs Action On Whitney Thefts

By the Associated Press.

Representatives of three Government agencies, the Securities Commission and the Postoffice and Justice Departments, yesterday considered whether Richard Whitney should be called before a Federal grand jury.

Spokesmen said they wished to determine whether there was evidence that securities involved in failure of the New Yorker's brokerage concern had been in interstate commerce.

Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, was arrested March 10 on charges of taking $105,000 from a trust fund left to relatives and schools, and on March 11 was charged with the theft of more than $100,000 in securities from the New York Yacht Club, of which he was treasurer.

Colored Man Held In Numbers Raid

George Crawford, 44, colored, of 121 G street northwest, yesterday was ordered held in $1,500 bond to appear before the grand jury on charges of operating lottery, and selling liquor without a permit.

Crawford was arrested with ten other colored men, who were later released, in a raid by Detective Sergt. G. C. Deyoe and other members of the vice squad in the 100 block of G street northwest.

Ten cents in marked money, an adding machine, several numbers books and a quantity of numbers slips were seized in the raid.

House Strikes Policy Section From Navy Bill

Emphatic Approval Monday Forecast as Measure Is Completed.

By the Associated Press.

The House all but passed the Administration's Big-Navy bill yesterday. It completed consideration of the measure, deferring a final vote until Monday.

Practically all observers expect the chamber to give emphatic approval to the measure, which authorizes 46 new warships, 22 auxiliary vessels and 950 airplanes.

Policy Section Dropped.

However, a section on "naval policy" was stricken out on a point of order. As sponsored by Representative Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, it would have committed the United States to a fleet big enough to defend both coasts simultaneously and to a policy of non-aggression.

It was reported the Administration desired elimination of the amendment in the belief that, if it were retained, it might lead to controversy in the Senate and possible attempts to restrict the fleet's sphere of operations drastically.

Other developments bearing on foreign affairs follow:

Secretary of State Hull announced America's policy of nonintervention and neutrality toward Spain would be continued, although Spanish Ambassador De Los Rios yesterday said this country's embargo on arms to Spain should be lifted because Germany and Italy were supplying war materials to the insurgents.

Chilly to Soviet Plan.

Hull said he was studying Soviet Foreign Minister Litvinoff's suggestion for an international conference on collective action against aggressor nations. But the State Department attitude toward the proposal was chilly.

At his press conference, President Roosevelt said he was not onsidering lifting the embargo on arms to Spain. He declined to answer a question as to whether any tangible steps were being taken to relieve the situation in Europe.

34 of 100 Who Ask Aid Don't Need It

Duties of the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals, through which the Community Chest deals with its nine member hospitals, were explained to Chest workers last night by its director, Ross Garrett.

The bureau investigates the economic status of each person who applies for free or below cost medical care and certifies for Chest assistance only those cases which otherwise would be deprived of needed medical attention, he said.

Thirty-four out of every 100 persons who apply at the agency, 901 Eighth street northwest, are able to pay their own expenses after being aided in preparing budgets, terms of payment and ways of getting care at minimum cost, according to Garrett.

He pointed out that all needy persons in the Capital who are not sick enough to be in a hospital but require out-patient treatment, have to be cared for at clinics at Community Chest expense. In most other cities tax-supported clinics bear a part of this burden, he said.

Loath to Fight for U. S., He Sues for Citizenship

By the Associated Press.

Abraham Warkentin, Chicago mennonite minister, appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday from a decision denying him American citizenship because he refused to pledge himself, if necessary, to "take up arms in defense of this country."

Mitchell Urges House to Save Girl's School

Colored Representative Opposes Sending Inmates to Boys' Home.

An appeal to the House not to approve the District supply bill provision closing the National Training School for Girls was made yesterday by Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, only colored member of Congress.

Assailing the conferees' plan to have the inmates transferred to the Industrial Home School for Colored Children at Blue Plains, Mitchell declared that the latter is not equipped to absorb the 50 colored girls.

The consolidation, Mitchell predicted, probably will result in "rioting and other behavior which might well become a scandal in the eyes of the community and the Nation."

The amendment will be one of a dozen or more to be voted on in the House when it takes up the conference report probably on Monday.

Slayer of Woman Walks Calmly to Chair in D.C. Jail

After nine stays of execution, Norman Wesley Robinson, colored, 26, died in the electric chair at the District Jail yesterday for the attack murder of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, middle-aged Government typist.

Resigned to his fate and showing no outward sign of emotion, Robinson walked to the chair without assistance. The current was turned on at 10:04 a. m. and Robinson was pronounced dead at 10:07:30. He proclaimed his innocence to the end.

With the mournful chant of the Rev. James E. Pinn ringing in his ears, Robinson walked into the death house and waved goodbye to the guards. He was calm at the last minute, but attaches said he had broken down about an hour before.

'Y' Council to Dance.

The Dormitory Council of the Central Young Men's Christian Association will celebrate its fifth anniversary with a dance at 9:30 tonight in the gymnasium of the "Y" Building, 1736 G street northwest.

Stanton Gets Life For Killing Cabby

District Justice Daniel E. O'Donoghue yesterday overruled a motion for a new trial and sentenced Donald K. Stanton, jr., to life imprisonment following conviction on a charge of second degree murder.

Testimony at the trial was that Stanton, proprietor of a small rooming house, on New York avenue northwest, had boarded up an apartment he had leased to Ray E. Childress, cab driver, to prevent him from entering. When Childress, a husky chauffeur, sought to break down the barricade, a fight ensued and he was shot.

Trouble between the two men arose when Stanton "dunned" Childress for rent of less than $5.

Hitch-Hike Murderer Blames 'Love' in Chair

Tucker Farm, Ark., March 18 (AP). Lester Brockelhurst, 24, of Galesburg, Ill., who murdered three men in the course of a hitch-hiking tour with his sweetheart in the spring of 1937, was put to death today. He blamed his plight on a "slight love affair," voicing his rancor in a 12-minute statement after the electrodes had been strapped to his head.

Irish Setter Slips Away to Celebrate St. Patrick's Day

The call of St. Patrick's Day proved too strong for "Red," an Irish setter, owned by Col. Harry D. Mitchell, U. S. Army, attached to the adjutant general's office.

Col. Mitchell, who lives at 1847 Plymouth street northwest, reported to police yesterday that "Red" had slipped out of his collar Thursday, and disappeared. He had not been located last night.

"Red," less than two years old, is the veteran of a dozen disappearances.

Brazil Crushes Fascist Plot to Murder Vargas

3,000 Swastika Daggers Seized With Leaders of Greenshirts.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, March 18.—Police announced today the frustration of a plot by members of the once-powerful Fascistic Integralist Party to assassinate President Getulio Vargas and to engineer widespread revolt in Brazil.

Several leaders of the green-shirted Integralist Party were arrested in swift night raids. Arms and ammunition, said to be intended for the uprising, were seized.

A radio transmitter and 3,000 daggers bearing swastika emblems were taken in a raid on the home of Plinio Salgada, Integralist leader.

Salgada, who escaped, was declared a fugitive from justice, as was Gustavo Barroso, generally regarded as No. 2 Integralist.

Wide Killings Planned.

Barroso is a well-known author and member of the Brazilian Academy of Letters who once shouted "I am good for ten men in a fight."

Central police headquarters said revolts were to have been staged simultaneously in the early morning of March 11.

The announcement said a special platoon of Green Shirts was detailed to assassinate Vargas, members of his cabinet and other prominent persons, including journalists who had opposed the Integralists.

Terrorist bands of Green Shirts were to have occupied police and army stations, light and power plants, while others deployed through streets tossing bombs.

Party Was Dissolved.

The Integralists were an important political factor in Brazil before Vargas' coup d'etat of last November 10, when he proclaimed a new constitution vesting him with supreme power.

The President followed his coup with a proclamation dissolving the Integralists as a political party, as well as all other parties.

Vargas' ban on political activities also hit German Nazis in Brazil, prompting representations by the German Embassy against the ruling. Only two days ago the President disclosed the rejection of the German contentions.

2 Japanese Forces Drive for Suchow

Shanghai (Saturday), March 19 (AP).—Japanese asserted today they speedily were forcing a wedge on the coastal side of China's central front behind unrelenting artillery and aviation bombardments.

One column, they said, was well past Lincheng, within 50 miles of Suchow, objective of the offensive, where the north-south Tientsin-Pukow and the east-west Lunghai railroads cross.

They said another, converging from a wide angle, had driven Chinese from Lini, 70 miles northeast by east of Lincheng, and expected momentarily to capture the town, an important market center and site of China's only diamond mines. Chinese, however, denied they had been forced back.

Brazil Police Nip Fascist Plot to Assassinate Vargas

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Wardman Dies; Made and Lost Riches in Realty

headed and controlled totaled $30,000,000.

Five years later he was broke. His shoestring had been stretched to the depression which Piped out fortunes as a child's eraser blots figures from a blackboard. In August, 1930, he had to sign away his controlling interest in the tremendous financial structure his genius had created.

At that time, two appraisals of the Wardman properties were made by two different firms of engineers, which differed $5,000,000. At depression values, Weaver Bros. appraised the properties at $23,000,000. A few months later, Ford, Bacon and Davis tendered an appraisal of $28,000,000 for the same holdings.

Illness joined forces with economic disaster but Wardman fought back. Forty-five years after he landed in New York, less than ten years after the crash of 1929, Harry Wardman lay on a bed at Homeopathic Hospital and tried to direct a comeback.

Retorted to Charges.

His office then occupied only one room at 1512 K street northwest, one block from the sandstone and marble building at 1435-37 K street northwest, where once he had directed an army of Wardman clerks, stenographers, architects, engineers and salesmen. Meantime, he had gone through a storm of recrimination, blame and Congressional investigation. It was said he built "cheap stuff," that he overbuilt Washington, that he brought colored laborers here who were left stranded and on relief when the big crash came. All these he faced with his head up.

"I am not the only builder who has seen his fortune built in 30 years of work taken from him in this depression," he said the day he signed away his business for nothing. "I can quit, but I don't want to. I still have 500 lots and I'm going to build houses on them."

Wardman also worked on plans to build a $4,000,000 medical center on the site of the old British Embassy at Connecticut avenue and N street northwest. Nothing came of this project.

Sold Cloth in U. S.

The only son of Eli and Alice Wardman, textile workers, he learned his father's trade and launched himself in his accidentally adopted country selling cloth for John Wanamaker in Philadelphia. There he met and married Mary Hudson and brought her to Washington in 1895, living in a modest house in Brookland near the Franciscan Monastery, where the only child by this marriage, now Mrs. Alice Rheem, was born. Mary Hudson Wardman died in 1900.

During his life in Philadelphia, the young cloth salesman had worked for a while as timekeeper for a contractor and found himself fascinated by building operations. He bought a set of carpenter tools, taught himself the trade and became an expert stair-builder.

To the last he considered himself a carpenter and builder. "I am a carpenter," he once told a House sub-committee, "I am a builder, an engineer, a constructor. Books are a bore to me.

"All I know is we paid big income taxes. That means we make money. I thing things are going so well I raise the salaries of my associates."

In Washington he worked at that trade for several years, saved some money, and when he met another Englishman with an eye to the future, joined forces with him and built a row of houses "out in the country" on Longfellow street northwest. They sold this row at a profit of $5,000 each and Wardman at once launched another and longer row.

Dresden "Quality" Project.

Washington at that time was a city of boarding houses and Wardman believed Government workers would rather live in small apartments, keep house and have some semblance of the homes they left to take jobs in the Capital. Selling and renting as fast as they were built, his properties attracted investors and subsidiary companies were organized. His first venture into the "quality field" was the Dresden at Connecticut avenue and Kalorama road northwest, which was completed in 1912.

Then, in 1916, Wardman launched the most ambitious project, up to that time, Washington residential building had known. In 1916 he built the huge Wardman Park Hotel which cost $1,000,000 above estimates and all but finished Harry Wardman then and there. The World War, with its influx of Government clerks, saved him.

Poles Mass Troops on Border; Foe Reported Ready to Yield

Poland

who wondered whether they too would lose their independence.

A Polish government communique said Lithuania had made an unacceptable offer to settle the border incident by appointment of a mixed commission.

The statement said the proposal was rejected because it did not include actual pacification of the border, which, in Poland's view, can be accomplished only by restoring diplomatic relations.

(In Paris, where it was disclosed France and Russia had taken joint efforts to bring pressure on both nations for a peaceful settlement, the Lithuanian Legation also said Poland had turned down an offer to name envoys to meet in a neutral city.

(Britain also made representations.)

Developments were watched in Warsaw by at least three dominant European nations—Britain, France and Italy—whose diplomatic representatives were in constant touch with both sides.

Both Memel and Danzig are the same to Reichsfuehrer Hitler as Austria was.

Germans in Memel.

Memel is just across the Memel River from Germany's east Prussia. The city was given to Lithuania after the World War with a surrounding territory of 1,099 square miles, in which 130,000 Germans live. It was taken from Germany.

One version was that Germany might seize Memel without asking Poland, in order to hold a trump card with which to bargain for the return of the Polish corridor—the Polish strip to the sea that separates the rest of Germany from East Prussia.

Hitler only recently commented that the corridor unfortunately involved German territory.

Col. Joseph Beck, Poland's foreign minister, therefore, apparently has attempted to buy Germany off by promising not to object should a German fleet quietly steam into Danzig and proclaim the Free City part of Germany—when and if Poland's armies cross into Lithuania.

Berlin Confirms Pact.

(A source close to the chancellery in Berlin said such an arrangement had been made and Germany, therefore, had resolved to stand aside, withdrawing her objections to Polish action.)

A fever of excitement swept Poland and vented itself throughout the day in mass demonstrations, rallies and political meetings.

A climax came this afternoon at Wilno, where hundreds of thousands of impassioned Poles acclaimed Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's strong man.

"We want Memel as a Baltic port," they shouted to him. He was at the frontier to supervise large movements of infantry, artillery, cavalry, tanks and other motorized units.

Fuel was added to the fire by reports here that Lithuania had refused to surrender her claim to Wilno, Lithuania was said, otherwise, to have agreed to "normalize" her relations with Poland through exchanges of diplomatic officials and resumption of broken rail, air and other traffic.

Decision Tomorrow.

(In Kovno, Lithuania's capital, however, the government summoned the Seimas (Parliament) to meet tomorrow to answer the ultimatum.

(Her government's attitude was described as conciliatory. It attempted to ban anti-Polish demonstrations in order to ease the tension, but news that Smigly-Rydz was at the frontier sent a wave of excitement through the country.

(At Geneva, Lithuania's League of Nations delegate called Warsaw's ultimatum "arrogant." He indicated that Lithuania, even if she yields, will submit the question to the League Council.)

From the Polish viewpoint, the ultimatum was indivisible—to reject one section would mean rejection of the entire document and make agreement impossible.

The government said envoys could be appointed only if Kaunas accepted comp tely. It insisted such appointments be made at Tallinn, capital of Estonia, tomorrow without further discussion.

No Changes Allowed.

Any change proposed by Lithuania or no answer at all, it said, would be regarded as rejection of Poland's demands, and in that case Poland would take steps to protect her interests.

Reports here said Lithuanians were incensed. They long have contended Wilno is to them what Cracow is to the Poles themselves or Philadelphia to the United States—the cradle of their liberty.

For 18 years, Poles say, Lithuania has been promising to 'normalize" relations. If Lithuania will not behave now, the Polish attitude is, Poland will have to absorb her and rule over her.

Beck and the Polish government, apparently, are convinced Germany will do nothing beyond seizing Danzig.

On the German side, however, one hears that German troops will take Memel as soon as the Poles begin to move.

Eyes Upon Ukraine.

One version is that Beck will give assurances immediately that when Poland takes over Lithuania, the Memel question will be adjusted to the satisfaction of both.

This version contemplates that, ultimately, Poland will expand toward the Ukraine—Soviet Russia's wheat-producing province toward which Der Fuehrer has turned yearning eyes—while Germany will restore Memel, Latvia and Estonia to the Baltic German barons who once owned that section of Europe.

It is pointed out in that connection that many Germans from Baltic regions are high in the ranks of the Nazis' Brown Shirt Storm Troopers and Black Shirt Elite Guards.

East Prussia, bordering Lithuania, is heavily militarized. Three divisions of infantry and one brigade of cavalry are there. With an air force of undivulged size, Germany's power in East Prussia is estimated at about 50,000 men.

In the opinion of military experts, this force could be brought up to 120,000 men within a few days.

Paris Alarm Grows.

Paris, March 18 (U.P.).—French alarm over the Polish-Lithuanian dispute was aggravated tonight by newspaper speculation that Poland might have offered Germany a strip of land through the Danzig corridor, reuniting Germany and East Prussia, in exchange for a free hand in dealing with Lithuania.

French diplomats, whose anxiety at Hitler's moves have become almost a hysteria, feared the Lithuanian seaport of Memel, detached from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles, might find its way back into German hands in event of a Polish invasion of Lithuania.

Reports regarding Memel brought sharp official denials from Berlin, where it was pointed out that Germany's only interest in the Baltic dispute was a desire for a speedy, peaceable settlement.

U. S. Aid Asked.

Chicago, March 18 (AP).—The Lithuanian American Congress in a telegram to Secretary Hull asked the United States today to "use utmost influence to prevent violence by aggressor nations against Lithuania."

Lithuania Leaders Meet.

Kovno, Lithuania, March 18 (AP). Lithuania's President, Antanas Smetona, met tonight with his ministers and army leaders on the eve of a special Parliament session to face an ultimatum from Poland.

A semiofficial appeal was broadcast to the people exhorting them to remain calm in the face of the sudden Polish stroke and the massing of Polish troops near the Lithuanian frontier.

U. S. Must Keep Aloof for Peace, Kennedy Says

London

under any circumstances short of actual invasion."

2. "The United States could never remain neutral in the event a general war should unhappily break out."

"No One Wins War."

If a general war should come, he predicted, "we should make ourselves very strong and then pursue whatever course we considered to be best for the United States."

The American people, he added, "are appalled by the prospect of war as it is now waged. We cannot see how armed conflict can be expected to settle any problem or to bring happiness and contentment to any nation. There certainly was no winner in the World War, we can all see now."

Another war, he said, "would bankrupt the world to a point where a new civilization and a new form of society would have to be slowly and haltingly evolved — something of which we have no conception today."

He extolled the remedy of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull—"economic peace" based on trade agreements.

The United States has no intention of attacking anyone, Kennedy continued and does not expect to be attacked.

"It is now, and intends to remain, on friendly terms with every country in the world. If the force of events should make it impossible for us to follow this policy, my country will decide, when the time comes, what to do to preserve the welfare of its own citizens.

One of the reasons the majority of Americans are not interested in the details of foreign affairs, he said, is that "we have by no means solved our internal difficulties."

"Nothing constructive can be built on false hopes and false fears," Kennedy said. "We believe it is wise to make clear that any stand the American people takes will be based primarily on the fundamental and firm ground of national interest, which is the soundest basis for relations between nations."

Advocating Secretary Hull's program of reciprocal treaties to stimulate world trade, Kennedy said:

"We must bear in mind that some stimulation of industrial production has been caused by the rearmament programs. Such stimuli cannot last indefinitely and we must now make economic provision for taking up the slack which may one day result."

Peace is the essence of the kind of trade this country is trying to promote, he declared.

"You cannot run down a customer with a bayonet. You cannot force people to buy things. If people trade with you, they probably like you and have no thought of killing you. If the nations of the world would trade liberally and naturally among themselves a new kind of security would be born, a security based on intelligent self-interest and not on force."

London Diplomats Act.

London, March 18 (U.P.).—The British empire took diplomatic action today against war or the threat of war in Spain, in central Europe and on the Polish-Lithuanian frontier.

As a result of urgent British efforts, including consultations with France, diplomatic experts in London predicted the crisis had passed, at least temporarily.

British foreign officials took these steps:

1. Warsaw and Kovno were notified that Britain viewed the border dispute with the greatest concern, and warned the governments that the dispute should not be allowed to blaze into war.

2. London, working in conjunction with Paris, addressed a note to both governments in the Spanish civil war urging in "most specific terms" that barbarous attacks on undefended, non-military populations cease.

law, which permits the government to take over any industry and its property.

Exchange dealings presumably were suspended to halt a flight of capital from the country and to keep the present maintained price of the peso.

Cardenas charged that the foreign companies made an undercover campaign abroad and in Mexico which created an adverse effect upon the country.

Embargo Too Slow.

He added that an embargo against the oil companies, which could have been made in accordance with the labor code, was too slow for the seriousness of the condition.

The President then appealed to every Mexican citizen to support his government in such a transcendental step.

The President's nationalization order followed an action of the petroleum workers' union requesting its members to cease work at midnight. The union's collective contract with 17 American and other foreign oil companies was terminated by the federal board of conciliation and arbitration.

The board voted to terminate the contract because of the refusal of oil operators to comply with the $7,300,000 increased wage award handed down last December 18 and affecting 18,000 workers. The board had ordered companies to pay the workers three months' severance pay, estimated at between $4,170,000 and $4,726,000.

Hitler Warns of More Moves To Free German Minorities

bench the new governor of Austria, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, and other representatives of what is now a German province.

Justifying his swift seizure of Austria, he said his decision to march into the land of his birth was dictated by the realization that otherwise bloody civil war would break out.

"I was determined to spare Austria the fate of Spain," he declared. "Schuschnigg can thank God I acted —for my decision saved him and 10,000 others their lives."

He declared the time was past when Germans just across the border could be mistreated.

"There comes a time when it is simply impossible for a self-respecting nation to look on any longer," he said.

Seldom has the Fuehrer spoken so energetically, with such confidence in his might, with such contempt, as he did for what he termed the theory that Germans, because they were Germans, could be denied the elemental right of self-determination.

That right, he declared, is one "which one grants to the most primitive colonial tribes as a matter of course."

"Rights must be rights, even where Germans are concerned," he shouted amid applause.

Warned Schuschnigg.

Referring to his talk February 12 at Berchtesgaden with Schuschnigg, then chancellor of Austria, he said he explained "most earnestly" that continued suppression of Nazi patriots inevitably would result in revolutionary uprisings which would compel Germany to intervene.

He said he had proposed to Schuschnigg a way out which would lead to gradual internal pacification and thus to reconciliation not only between Austrians but between the two German states.

"However, I warned him it would be my last attempt," he said. If the Berchtesgaden agreement failed "I was determined to safeguard the rights of German people in my homeland with those means which since time immemorial remained the means of last resort."

He then reviewed how he followed the talk with his Reichstag speech of February 20 in which, he said "I extended my hand to Schuschnigg.

"But in his first reply (Schuschnigg's speech of February 24, to the Austrian Diet in which he said 'Austria must remain Austria' he thrust aside that hand."

Then followed the "fantastic" Schuschnigg plebiscite plan, the real purpose of which, Hitler said, was seeming justification for "further still more brutal suppression" of the German-Austrian people.

"Hail the Savior."

"I was now determined to put an end to the rape of my homeland.

"I therefore ordered necessary measures designed to spare Austria the fate of Spain."

With grim emphasis he added:

"Behind this, my decision, stands 75,000,000 people and in front of it stands henceforth the armed might of Germany."

He concluded his address with the cry:

"One people! One Reich! Germany! Hail, victory!"

And Goering, No. 2 Nazi, pronounced a benediction as he in turn cried:

"All hail the Fuehrer, the savior, hail!"

Goering, in voicing the thanks of the Reichstag and nation for Hitler's Austrian victory, exclaimed "you conquered Austria not with bloody use of force but with your warm heart."

Wounds were not inflicted—they were healed," he said.

Hitler stood with head bowed, apparently deeply moved, as Goering spoke and deputies cheered.

Then cabinet ministers and other leaders, including Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, exchanged warm handcasps with him.

He made a pointed reference to his speech to the Reichstag on February 20, saying:

"Already in my speech on February 20, I pointed out there could hardly be regulation of special territorial conditions in Europe satisfactory to all sides concerned.

May Bow to Justice.

"That is, we are not of the opinion that the aim of the national government should be realized in every direction, whether through protests or by actions of territorial demands which are motivated by national necessities and in the end cannot, after all, lead to general national justice.

In his example of the Austrian state as based upon the "stark violation of the right of self-determination" of people of German nationality, Hitler said:

"Thus, for example, the formation of the new Austrian truncated state represented a measure necessitated by a stark violation of the rights of self-determination of 8,500,000 people of German nationality. This violation was admitted with cynical frankness.

"For too well-known inventors of the rights of self-determination, and freedom of the peoples as well as to the ubiquitously interested past world governesses, who otherwise pretend to be so much concerned about justice under us, it meant absolutely nothing but simply the strangulation of the free will of six and a half millions by the simple device of so-called peace dictates, and to compel these by brute force to bow to the robbery of their right of self-determination and take lying down the unnatural separation from their great common mother country.

"When Austria nevertheless decided to submit anschluss to a vote —and here I would recall especially to the democratic gentlemen in London and Paris this was at a time when neither in Germany nor Austria there existed any nationalism—and when this ballot resulted in over 95 per cent of all the votes for reunion, then the apostles of new international law simply forbade this friendly demonstration of the true will of these unfortunate peoples who were severed from their own folk.

Cites Economic Distress.

The tragic feature of it all was this: Austria to begin with was entirely bereft of the strength to live.

"Economic distress and its correspondingly horrible annual mortality quota grows alarmingly.

"In a city like Vienna alone there were 24,000 deaths in the past year compared with 10,000 births. I am not saying this in order to make an impression on Democratic worthies for I know their hearts are completely hard in the face of such facts.

"They can stand quietly by without being moved in the least when a half million people are massacred in Spain. But without blushing they can also pretend to be deeply shocked if, in Berlin or Vienna, economic foundations are removed from under the Jewish agitator.

"No, I mention this merely in order quite coldly to point out how, for millions of people, violators who made the peace dictates pronounced a death sentence that gradually was becoming effective through the very fact that this state, which was unable to live, had been created.

"No one who has been able to probe the moral and mental imperfections of man need wonder at the fact that later on, inside the abattoirs, were found those who were ready with personal aid to prop up such foreign-made, sham sovereignty and thereby set themselves up as ruling powers at the cost of their unhappy peoples.

"But neither can it cause surprise that in the mass of nationally thinking people concerned, there began to grow up bitter exasperation, and that fanatic determination arose to remove such unnatural revolting treatment some day and set up holier rights of internal folkic life in place of violation of people under the guise of democratic untruths . . .

"Rights Remain Rights."

"Fulfilment of the wish for a return to the fatherland, however, was declined as inopportune for democracies, yet the mere hope for it was branded as a veritable crime.

"Such violation of rights can, however, not be veiled in the long run in the transparent morals of certain international institutions.

"Rights must remain rights, even when Germans are involved

"Then who can be surprised if the people to whom this right has been consistently denied are compelled finally to secure these human rights for themselves?

"Nations are a creation according to God's will, and of eternal duration while the League of Nations is an entirely doubtful construction of human imperfection, human greed and selfishness.

Reich a World Power.

"One thing is certain: Just as peoples have lived for thousands of years without the existence of the League of Nations, so, too, there will come the time when there has been no League of Nations for ages, although peoples will continue to exist for thousands of years more.

"This institution would have meaning only then if it brought its morals in consonance with those morals that correspond to universally equal, therefore better justice . . .

"So long as Germany was prostrate in deepest misery, its attraction for the millions of masses of our peoples living outside the Reich was only a limited one, although these masses even then already were animated by the will to unite with the Reich. Despite its misery . . . Germany has now become a world power again."

organizations joined in presenting the protest to the Board of Public Welfare.

Joseph E. Dayton, director of the Bureau of Rehabilitation, said that the released prisoner's need should be considered when he is given his gratuity. But he expressed doubt that the few dollars now being granted are given with a view to covering the real need.

Deficit Forced Cut.

The cut was made from the $10 ordered by the Commissioners in 1929 in order to meet a deficit in the penal institutions' budget, it was pointed out.

"We do not think all the deficit should be made up from the gratuities account, but that it should be distributed over expenses as well," Dayton said.

"We think the parole board should be given a chance—which it certainly does not have under the decreased gratuity arrangement. Recently we asked the Community Chest to give us some money, we were so pressed. The Chest, of course, thought it was strange that a public agency should go to it for funds."

Dayton cited instance after instance in which men were paroled with $2 to $5 in their pockets and showed the impossibility of solving the rehabilitation situation without "stop-gap funds."

Hugh Rivers, secretary to the parole board, said that from 12 to 13 men daily are "dumped into the parole office, seven or eight of whom should be provided with shelter, food and jobs."

The freighter had left La Nouvelle, a French port north of Cerbere yesterday, en route to Barcelona.

In eastern Spain Gen. Franco's center columns took San Francisco in their push toward Maella.

The left wing forces occupied Santo Domingo, just east of the confluence of the Guadalope and Ebro rivers near Caspe.

Insurgents reported little resistance from government forces except in scattered engagements between their rear guard and the insurgent advance columns.

Bombers Pound Barcelona.

Barcelona, March 18 (AP).—Insurgent bombers pitilessly pounding Barcelona today raised the toll of known dead in a 42-hour series of raids to 600 and the number of injured to 1,200.

Seven attacks today by 5 p. m. (noon E. S. T.) alone killed more than 100 and wounded an estimated 150.

An unknown number of persons lay buried in the wreckage of the blood-soaked city which the insurgents converte d from a gay capital to one of mourning.

People Huddle in Subways.

Tonight the populace either moved into subways or fled to the suburbs in expectation of more attacks to come.

The United States Embassy and consulate temporarily were transferred to the outskirts of the city as were other foreign embassies.

A French vice consul was killed and a consul injured in yesterday's raids.

Thousands of persons filled the streets tonight, treking with bundles and children toward the countryside.

Stations Are Jammed.

Every subway station was jammed with men, women and children, some of whom are living underground day and night.

The raiders today skipped the central section, struck yesterday, and concentrated on the quarter in the southwestern portion of the city near the former exposition grounds.

Attacks began at 1:10 a. m. By 8:40 a. m. the day's death list stood 50. Twelve bombs dropped in a raid at 1 p. m. killed approximately another 50.

Davis, of Elkridge, Md., in memory of her mother, Mrs. E. Dallett Hemphill, West Chester, Pa. Gen. Tyndale, a kinsman of of Mrs. Davis' mother, was a Federal officer in the Civil War; was wounded at the Battle of Antietam and later took a prominent part in the Battle of Wauhatchie in Tennessee. He wrote and spoke extensively following the war. The park officials were gratified at the gifts and pointed out that the park library is growing steadily, but there still are many needed items. Particularly wanted are Volumes 1-13 of the Southern Historical Society Papers.

Smearing The Opposition.

Several days ago Senator Minton, chairman of the Senate Lobby Committee, let it be known that his investigators are searching out evidence of a campaign "to defeat the objectives of the Administration." Apparently the Senator is particularly eager to put on the spot individuals and groups opposing the Administration's reorganization bill. Certainly that is the impression given by the committee's probe of yesterday.

If Senator Minton intends to examine the biography and present standing of every one fighting the reorganization bill, he will have a tremendous job on his hands. Probably no organization which is trying to head off the granting of tremendous powers to the President will object to explaining its work to the Lobby Committee. But the committee appears to be seeking something more than information. Far more important seems to be the prospect of smearing citizens who dare to campaign against New Deal bills.

The Lobby Committee became active only when complaints of widespread Administration pressure to pass this bill began to come from Capitol Hill. Apparently Senator Minton hopes to minimize these reports by showing that lobbyists have been active on the other side. There is little prospect that lobbyists for and against the bill will be examined impartially. No one lobbying for the bill has been asked to appear. Senator Minton says he will call such witnesses if some member of the Senate requests it and furnishes the committee with the lobbyists' names. But that is quite a different matter from setting investigators on the trail of lobbyists against the bill.

Telegrams read by Senator Frazier strongly suggest official pressure for enactment of the reorganization bill. Various other Senators are known to be alarmed over the use of Administration influence to keep the majority of legislators in line. One Senator believes that this lobbying within official circles has reached the proportions of a national scandal.

If that is the case, the Lobby Committee has a most useful task to perform. But efforts to smear individuals and groups working against "the objectives of the Administration" are more akin to the methods of the OGPU than to unbiased exposure of pressure groups. There is nothing unpatriotic or dishonorable in opposition to administration plans in a democracy. It is far more undemocratic for executive officers to apply pressure to attain their ends. At some point in its proceedings the Lobby Committee might well take time out to ask itself what sort of government it is working for.

"In One-Half Of The World."

Certain strange inconsistencies in our so-called neutrality policy are emphasized by the plea of the Spanish Ambassador that the United States should permit his hard-pressed government to purchase munitions here.

In the matter of arms embargoes we have for the past eight months been following a double standard. What the Government has done with respect to the civil war in Spain it has carefully avoided doing in the case of China and Japan.

The President's decision to refrain from applying the neutrality law to the combatants in the Far East has met with the tacit or active approval of the great majority of Americans. That is not due to the influence of munition makers but to general unwillingness to see the hands of the Administration in any way tied with reference to a dispute in an area where we have great interests, and where our constructive influence may well be potent in an eventual settlement.

The neutrality legislation was applied to the Spanish conflict on the assumption that this was purely a civil war, with the outcome of which the United States is in no way concerned. Embargoes there were also designed to assist the efforts of the international non-intervention committee to isolate this war. Now, however, the doctrine of non-intervention has gone by the boards and the far-reaching implications of the struggle are emphasized by the part which the Italian air force is playing in its effort to shatter republican morale by wholesale bombing of civilians in Barcelona.

Neutrality, however, remains our official policy toward Spain, even at the very moment when Secretary Hull is proclaiming that we cannot be neutral when well-recognized principles of international law are being overthrown. And that neutrality seems to many the more invidious because, as the Spanish Ambassador says, it operates against a government with which we have consistently maintained friendly relations.

In the interests of consistency, to say nothing of America's moral influence in a disordered world, the time for reconsidering the whole neutrality law would seem to have arrived. In fact Secretary Hull would seem to have that development in mind when he says that: "It would be absurd and futile for us to proclaim that we stand for international law, for the sanctity of treaty obligations, for non-intervention in internal affairs of other countries . . . but only in one-half of the world."

The Railroad Crisis.

A committee consisting of Chairman Splawn and Commissioners Mahaffie and Eastman of the ICC has been appointed by President Roosevelt to bring to him within a week "complete, definite and factual recommendations for immediate action by Congress in regard to the whole railroad situation." Its task is twofold—to suggest certain immediate remedies and to outline a long-range program designed to provide permanent relief for the carriers.

About all that can be done to cope with the present emergency is to recommend more liberal financial assistance to particularly hard pressed roads. It is the long-range program that is of vital concern to the country, for it will determine the ultimate fate of the railroads. The very unfavorable earnings of Class I carriers in recent months, together with the very inadequate rate relief accorded by the ICC, have had one good result. They have focused attention upon the acute financial troubles of the railways and spurred the Administration to action.

It serves no good purpose to discuss the shortcomings of our regulatory system except as they throw light on the policies that should guide the Government in future dealings with the railways. One inescapable conclusion to be drawn from a survey of the past, however, is that we need a comprehensive regulatory policy embracing not only the railways but competing highway and water carriers.

There are decided limits, of course, to the amount of relief obtainable through rate increases, especially in times of depression. Consequently, even if the ICC had been more generous, the roads would be compelled to look elsewhere for a remedy. The chief proposals reported to be under consideration by the President's committee contemplate reductions in operating costs. This may involve consolidation of existing railways into larger systems, elimination of duplicate equipment and coordination of terminal facilities.

Modernization of equipment is another objective which looks toward a reduction in operating costs. But the roads must have both the means to finance such long-range improvements and the incentive to do so, if they are to go ahead with their efficiency programs.

A preponderant proportion of the savings effected through consolidation or pooling of facilities by competing carriers would, as Chairman Splawn points out, necessarily be effected at the expense of labor. Thus, another problem of providing for displaced employes, would arise. In short, the financial rehabilitation of the roads is immensely complicated, and even when a program has been formulated its execution will be extremely difficult. Real progress has been made, however, just by recognizing that the railroads are confronted by a major crisis of long standing which calls for drastic remedies.

One Hopeful Trend.

Coming at a time when so much of each day's news is discouraging, the sudden rise in home construction is a significant ray of hope for better times. It was expected, of course, that the recent amendments to the Federal housing act would stimulate the building industry. But few anticipated that the response would be so immediate. Even sponsors of the liberalized mortgage insurance plan appear to be pleasantly surprised.

The fact that many building plans were delayed while this legislation was in the process of enactment accounts for some of the increased demand for mortgage insurance in recent weeks. But that does not explain the continued rapid upswing during the last fortnight. All previous FHA records as to volume of business have been broken. Indications are that 1938 will witness considerably more activity in the construction industry than did 1937.

It is not, however, the volume thus far attained that is most significant. Rather it is the response of the building industry and the public to this opportunity of financing homes at lower costs. No program of such magnitude can attain its maximum effectiveness within a few weeks or months. But with increasing co-operation on the part of the public it can in course of time prove a most vital contribution to recovery.

Most of the mortgages thus far insured have been for small individual homes. Large-scale projects are naturally slower in development. But a substantial volume of requests for mortgage insurance on multi-family, moderate-rental dwellings is now flowing into FHA offices. It is in these projects that the largest amount of activity is anticipated when the new program attains its maximum effectiveness.

In the meantime conferences are going forward with builders, real estate dealers, architects and other groups vitally interested in residential construction. As a result it is hoped that a more efficient building industry will gradually take shape if the advantages of large-scale building at reasonable costs are to be realized, a general modernization of obsolete practices will be essential. In short, this act should not give a mere fillip to recovery but should be conducive to sustained activity in the building field and allied activities, where so much unemployment has been concentrated.

The quick response of the dormant building industry to this constructive act should not be lost upon officials who are struggling with the problems of the current depression. Business is not slow to move forward where the road is clear.

Storm Over Chamberlain.

The storm of controversy which broke over Neville Chamberlain's head at the time of the Eden resignation is overshadowed by the tempest raging around the British Prime Minister now. He finds himself today that most hapless of individuals, a man who stakes all on a roll of dice loaded against him.

It may be doubted that Chamberlain ever had a majority of the British people with him in his policy of placating the Fascist dictators at any cost. But he had the adherence of his cabinet and his party to the program of negotiating with Mussolini and Hitler in the hope of securing greater stability in Europe.

The events of the past week have shown that this policy has been interpreted by the dictators as one of weakness. Indeed, in throwing Eden overboard, Chamberlain undoubtedly made it easier for Hitler to disregard Britain and to proceed, despite British objections, to the forcible incorporation of Austria in the German Reich. Mussolini has similarly shown contempt for Chamberlain's effort as "honest broker" by dropping all pretense of observing non-intervention in the Spanish war.

Were the Prime Minister a more flexible leader than is the case, the developments of the last few days might easily have led him to a complete about-face on policy. But, with a stubbornness worthy of a better cause, Chamberlain insists on staying put. The house of cards he has so elaborately built has crashed to the ground. But he endeavors to proceed on the assumption that it still stands.

By no means all of his fellow Conservatives are prepared to follow the Prime Minister now, as with whatever reluctance, they followed him last month when Eden was sent to Coventry. The policy of indecision and uncertainty which Chamberlain is pursuing seem ruinous to an increasing number of them. More and more members of his own party are demanding that the government take a stand calculated to preserve Britain's waning prestige and to check the rise of Nazi Germany as the dominant power in Europe.

Such an attitude, in all probability, is what Hitler himself now expects from Great Britain. As far back as 1924, when he wrote "Mein Kampf," the Fuehrer remarked that "England does not want Germany as a world power; France does not want Germany to be a power at all—a very essential difference." On this difference has been predicated all the German effort to drive a wedge between Anglo-French action.

Today, as Hitler's dreams of German hegemony in Central Europe are being realized, he must view with a certain contempt the British inability to check his triumphant march. And, with his clear insight in the field of power politics, it is to Hitler that the growing mistrust of Chamberlain in his own party will seem most logical.

Men With Hoes.

Last week-end marked the fiftieth anniversary of the blizzard of '88 and only a few days before Washington recalled the storm that covered the Capital at the Taft inauguration.

Nevertheless, spring is at the threshold. Kites proclaim it as does the preternatural green of the turf at this season. Bock beer, having been on sale, a month ahead of time as usual, also testifies to the end of winter. If more proof be needed that spring is just around the corner, the growing buzz of garden talk is final confirmation. Only yesterday a lady called The Post and asked if phosphate was good to sprinkle on a spring garden. We referred her to the White House as the fount of phosphate knowledge.

It may be her excited interest grew out of the new information that the Men's Garden Club of America is making strides in membership. Throughout the country, women who have traditionally preempted the field of floriculture are looking to their laurels—or probably it's jonquils—at this time of year.

How to explain this sudden rise in masculine gardening interest is uncertain. Perhaps it's only a passing fad. Perhaps it's a recoil action of the recession. Or perhaps war drives Occidentals, too, to escapist thoughts of "peaceful shrine gardens."

Just how does an advertising expert know how much of a girl's anatomy to reveal in an advertisement to attract a man's attention, and yet not take his mind entirely off the product being advertised?

Some one asks, "What would you advise a person who habitually falls in love at first sight?" We should advise him to consult an oculist or a psychiatrist.

Inflation comes so gradually that a lot of people will never become conscious of it until the 10-cent stores begin handling stocks and bonds.

"In some States auto owners who apply for relief are required to surrender their car license plates and keys."—Newspaper filler. In many cases, the only relief a person needs is to be relieved of his car.

Deckhand's Cry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us gently chide "A Reader" who forbearingly cracks down on you for your Ship of State editorial. Shall a New Deal maintain a vast propaganda department at public expense if no results accrue?

If the methods of our Incomparable Skipper suit one reader, the rest of us, the dumb voters, should exult, for our skipper's sealed orders today find him hove to in the same waters he and the S. S. United States put out from five years ago—Unemployed Cove (13,000,000). With one difference. Her barnacles were then outside. They're inside now, and she's more heavily waterlogged by addition of dead cargo and bilge in the shape of the national debt.

Recondition her? No, save the paper money, scrap her, build a new ship. Which is where us dumb voters come in, not the intelligent voters "A Reader" says voted the skipper to the helm and will vote a purge of his enemies in November. (Comment on governments which must threaten purges to attain their ends is omitted here.)

The we-planned-it bunco was still hot last election; spending unrestrained; repressive efforts symbolized by the court scheme had not yet been sprung. Such "intelligent" voters as now have their eyes unglued are likely to turn dumb this November, though a spending orgy may be used to give an appearance of prosperity. There'll be a purge, my fellow deckhands—but in which direction? DUMB VOTER.

Mr. Brookhart Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad Prof. Strakhovsky of the University of Maryland criticized my statement that the Soviet government "destroyed the most vicious autocracy of modern times," meaning the imperial regime. He claims this statement is not historically correct because it also overthrew the Kerensky government. This claim is a distortion of history in the American mind that has long needed correction. I have never denied Kerensky nor will history deny him the credit for first overthrowing the "vicious autocracy" of the Czar, but he did not "destroy" it. All through his weak rule the Czar was alive and within a stone's throw of the throne. Kerensky's army was commanded by Czarist officers and in the event of victory over Germany it would certainly have put him back on the throne.

Germany sent Lenin into Russia and the people followed him and for a time he favored Germany; but when Germany demanded a treaty at the point of the bayonet dismembering Russia's territory, he sought to join the allies and was rebuffed. These facts of history are made certain by Col. Raymond Robbins, of the American Red Cross, who was on the ground and in direct contact with Lenin and has related them fully in the Senate investigations.

The total fatalities of the Soviet revolution up to this time were 2,600 and then what happened? The Czarist generals who had been expelled organized counter-revolutionary armies—Yudenich at Archangel, Denikin and Urangel in the Black Sea territory and Kolchek and Semeonoff in Siberia. They were encouraged in various ways by English, French, American and Japanese armies, and these Czarist leaders were as cruel a lot as ever went out to war and this is when the slaughter began. Fortunately for history we have a true and accurate account of this war in Siberia by Gen. William S. Graves, who commanded our army there, in his book entitled "America's Siberian Adventure." Every American should read this book by this honest and able American general.

These civil wars resulted in the execution of the Czar and his family, the defeat of Kolchek, and the other Czarist generals, and the evacuation of the English, French, Japanese and American armies, who had no real right or business in that war. This is what destroyed the "vicious autocracy." It was not Kerensky. He has missed a great place in history by his failure cheerfully and loyally to accept the Soviet revolution. In that event he would certainly stand out as its forerunner.

Thank You.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read "Politics and People," by Mr. Waltman, in the March 11 issue of The Post, which was devoted to the current movements of the pacifists and to bringing out, beautifully I thought, the issues involved in proper and gradual armament and the loyalty due our President in regard to his responsibility at this precarious moment.

The Washington Post seems to me unique in the respect of reflecting a quality of thought and an attitude that we have associated always with spiritual man and his history. I appreciate such devotion.

Counter-Propaganda?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is no longer any doubt of the cleverness of Hitler. He has achieved his coups largely by incessant propaganda. Hitler shouts that all Germans desire to be under his rule and tries to fool the world into believing it. This points out the immense power of propaganda. It would be interesting to know why the democracies do not make known, chiefly by broadcast, the falsity of dictator speeches and expose their underlying methods.

Any casual headline reader of Hitler's triumphant entry into Vienna might easily look upon him as a hero and also be affected by his sentimental visit to his parents' burial plot. If he were beloved by his subjects, as he says he is, why a cordon of guards who allowed no person within 200 yards of him and protective planes over his head?

Broadcasts of indisputable truths would not be amiss at the present time for those who listen but do not read. ISABEL VICKERS.

"Time To Look Forward."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As our political Humpty-Dumpty, better known as the New Deal, has experienced almost complete collapse, it is generally conceded that no attempt will be made to reassemble the expiring, ill-constructed figure.

To many of us, the post-mortems concerning New Deal history, now appearing in print, seem futile and fatuous. It would seem the time is ripe to look forward, not backward; profit by our mistakes and costly blunders and erect a really substantial structure on the time-tested rocks of truth, justice and tolerance to all (including political minorities). Would Deny Ransoms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are persons in this world who do not value their lives at any price and will take a chance at all hazards if there is a possibility of a reward. Experience has proven that the Lindbergh law is inadequate. Put up a sign: "No more ransoms will be paid for the return of anyone kidnaped," and live up to it.

In the last four or five cases, the ransom has proved of no avail. Nip it in the bud and the crime will die a natural death. They will look in other fields for pasture green.

National Wealth And Public Debt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The National Industrial Conference Board of New York City made an estimate of the national wealth in 1934, and placed the figures at $286,200,000,000.

The economic experts and hard-headed businessmen composing this organization based the result of their national survey upon appraisable material in existence, and did not consider either potential wealth or the immediately productive powers of machinery and agriculture.

Since 1934 there have been such vast additions to the national wealth as to surpass the total wealth of some of the smaller nations.

These additions have come not only from the normal increase of wealth, but from great public works such as reforestation, the construction of mighty dams, elimination of soil erosion, road building in every section of the country and a variety of public works. Usability of a thing brought into existence by labor and which contributes to the health, comfort and happiness of the people is one element of wealth, which has been greatly stimulated and increased by New Deal expenditures in all parts of the country.

That there has been a steady advance in the national wealth since 1934 is visible to the eye in all parts of the country. While there may be no convincing estimate of the value of this advance in existence at the time, we might say that if the national wealth has been estimated to have increased as much as $20,000,000,000 in a single year, it certainly must have maintained this annual level of increase since 1934, with the vast public works construction of the present Administration.

Should this figure approximate the actual advance, then accepting the figures of the National Industrial Conference Board as the most authoritative obtainable, our national wealth today would be approximately $366,000,000,000, with a potential wealth (never overlooked in individuals and corporations seeking bank credit) beyond human ability to estimate.

With a national debt less than 10 per cent of the national wealth, and not 1 per cent of the potential national wealth, the United States Government is as sound as a rock.

We have but 2,880,000 people paying direct taxes to the Federal Government out of a population of over 130,000,000. Whenever Congress gets ready to broaden the tax basis, the Federal Government can begin immediately to amortize the national debt. And if it should be decided to go on a managed currency, as has Great Britain, it can pay off the national debt in currency as good as that of Great Britain.

Tony.

"BUT, John," my very economical wife complained, "You know that just this morning I ordered a dozen oranges from the store."

At the moment, I hadn't known why I bought the oranges. It wasn't because the man at the door was old and had a droopy mustache and had to peddle oranges on a rainy day.

It was because he reminded me of Tony.

Tony was the fruit vendor in our neighborhood. Every day he would push his heavy cart through the streets and yell, "Fina fruits. I gotta da fina fruits."

He was a little man and baggy, corduroy trousers made him appear as though his legs were half bent at the knee. His short blue coat, buttoned tightly about his narrow chest and sleeves creeping slowly up his wrists, made him a pitiful figure against the cold. His tan shoes, turned up at the ends by rain and sleet and heat, creaked mournfully as he trudged the streets.

On cold wintry days, Tony would clutch the coat about his throat with thin, rough fingers. His frail, stooped body would tremble when a deep coughing spasm threatened to make him lose grasp of the icy handle of the cart. But, always he would continue, "Fina fruits, I gotta da fina fruits."

At lunchtime, he placed a stick under the handle of his cart and sat on the curb to munch an apple or banana. He ate those with bruises on them or those too ripe to sell.

Back home, all of the kids in the gang laughed at Tony. They used to shout, "Here comes Humpy. Look at Humpy." Sometimes when Tony was tired and couldn't push his heavy cart up a hill, the gang would shout:

"Look at Tony, Can't even push an old cart up the hill."

But Tony didn't mind. He would just mop his brow with a big red handkerchief and try again. One cold day he slipped and fell on the ice and upset his rickety cart. The gang chased the apples and oranges down the hill, and ran away with them.

Once I felt sorry for Tony and helped him push the cart over the hill. The gang called me a sissy, but Tony patted my head and gave me an orange. After that, we became great friends.

When one day he invited me to come to his house and learn how to carve statues out of soap, I met Maria. Maria was Tony's wife. She sat in a wheelchair and couldn't walk. Tony said an auto ran over her one day while she was helping him with the cart.

"But, she willa be fina soon. The nexa mont' I have da mon' to have doctor fixa her up all o. k." Tony said. "I gotta da mon' now, but Maria, she say Antonio mus' finish da school first. Somaday he be da big lawyer."

Antonio, he said, was "one fina boy."

"When nex' mon', he finish da school, Maria, she willa walk again just alike me and Antonio."

One day Tony didn't show up at the usual time and I wondered what had happened to him. After the second day I went to his house. Maria answered the door.

Her eyelids were red and heavy with weeping. Lips that once revealed rows of white pearl-like teeth, were tightly shut with tragedy.

Tony, Maria told me, was dead. A policeman had found him slumped over the handle of his cart. The doctor said Tony had not been getting enough to eat.

"I always tolda Tonny, he no getta enough to eat," Maria said. "Everytime, he say he no hungry. He justa say, 'No, Maria, I no feela hungry, you eatta everything,'"

When Tony came down our street the last time, the gang didn't yell, "Hey, Tony. Look at Hump Tony."

They just stood and stared at the two big black cars roll slowly by. In the car back of Tony, his arms about Maria, was a tall young man. He was, I knew, Antonio.

"John, do you hear me? Tell the man that we don't need any oranges today."

"But, dear, we do. Don't you remember, only last week we used a dozen in less than three days."

Madness A La Carte.

From the New York Times.

Love, of course, makes the world go 'round, and consequently often leaves its victims dizzy. Unrequitted affection had a particularly spectacular effect on Amleto Rambelli, a normally sedate bookkeeper of Milan, Italy. Amleto, dressed in his best, went to a fashionable restaurant and reserved a table for seven. He commandeered all the vegetables in the place and ordered several bowls of mayonnaise. Arranging the vegetables on the tablecloth, he smothered them in mayonnaise. He then lay down on the table and instructed the waiter: "When my guests arrive please carve me with care, as though I were a roast chicken." All lovers are a little mad, but this seems to have been madness a la carte.

Freedom For Hoboes.

From the New York Times.

Lovers of human liberty will deplore the news, sent by The Associated Press from San Francisco, that Mr. Sam Hecht, official representative of The Hobo News, is about to set up a new and totalitarian hobo union. The provocation was great, if you take Mr. Hecht's word for it. All kinds of riffraff were getting into the old organization, the Hoboes of America, and putting the regular hoboes out of office. A regular hobo, according to his own definition, is a useful citizen. He is simply a migratory worker. The trouble was, one infers, that tramps and bums were boring from within. So Mr. Hecht announces: "In my union it's going to be different. I'm going to have it in the constitution that I can't be voted out of office."

Fair Enough

Mooney—And Billings.

San Francisco.

THE TIME approaches when the State of California will have to throw Tom Mooney out of prison, even at the expense of a full pardon, an apology and perhaps a cash indemnity. Mr. Mooney has been a martyr for 22 years, but he is still in good health, and if he were turned loose while sound of wind and limb his death outside San Quentin would have no nuisance power. If he should die in prison, however, notwithstanding the tenderest care, he would become a sacrifice to capitalism and a lower-case Lenin with the Communists of the earth.

PEGLER.

There has been much speculation as to whether Mooney free and sound of wind, as he undoubtedly is, would be more troublesome than Mooney in prison. That seems to be a tossup. In prison he is a world figure for Communist exploitation. He is vain and fond of publicity, and as a free man would surely go on the road as a symbol. He might offer himself as a candidate for President.

But after a time he might talk himself out and fall into disagreements with his comrades, who have shown that they are not above jealousy, even as the contemptible bourgeoisie. He might become a nuisance to them and be shot for treason. It is a point that has been considered hopefully against the fact that if he should die behind capitalistic bars his martyrdom would be permanent.

• • • •

THERE ARE some curious phases of the world-wide agitation for Mr. Mooney which have never been pointed out.

For one thing, Mr. Mooney had a codefendant in the celebrated Preparedness Day bombing case of 1916 which killed ten innocent bystanders and wounded 40. The codefendant was Warren K. Billings, also a young and bumptious labor slugger, who already had been convicted of transporting dynamite for persuasive purposes and who thus became a second offender or two-time loser.

But in the long campaign to liberate Mooney Mr. Billings has fallen into the obscurity of Paul Revere's horse. Nobody seems to care much about liberating Mr. Billings, and he has been somewhat piqued about this neglect, and with fair reason.

After the trial Mr. Billings argued that he could not have been bombing at the hour of the disaster because he was conscientiously employed in the noble work of dousing acid on automobiles in the furtherance of a current strike. His innocence is no less well established than his famous colleague's, or, to put it more appetizingly, his guilt is no more convincingly proven. He even produced the automobiles with the acid scars.

• • • •

BUT MR. BILLINGS is no Communist and his showmanship is negligible, so the cause has forgotten him—a neglect which must cast doubt on the sincerity of those who say their hearts bleed for Mr. Mooney purely as a victim of capitalistic injustice. Mr. Billings is a victim in the same degree, but if he should die in Folsom tomorrow the Free Mooney Movement would merely sigh and say, "Well, it comes to all of us."

The case of Mr. Mooney is not as cruel in the physical sense as it has been made to appear by those who have made a minor industry of the campaign to get him out. Not for years has there been any actual question of freeing Mooney in the sense of liberating him from the walls which by newspaper instinct are described as grim and gray.

He could have walked out on parole long ago, but has been holding out for a pardon, the full rights of citizenship and the privileges and perquisites of political martyrdom. He is correct in that, to be sure, but his martyrdom is no worse than th atof Mr. Billings and a mere incivility by comparison with some thousands of serverities practiced on political heretics in Moscow, the spiritual home of the campaign to liberate Tom Mooney.

Both should be forced to leave prison at once, for, as a member of the California Legislature remarked at Mooney's reception the other day, their guilt or innocence has ceased to be a matter of proof and has become one of personal conviction.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Will It Come To This?

Rome.—Adolf Hitler, the Big Shock 'Em and Grab 'Em Man, staged a surprise march into this city today and announced he had taken over Italy, with two districts missing. Der Fuehrer addressed all Italy by radio, the keynote of his speech being, "Welcome, Germans All!" This wouldn't have been so bad if he hadn't insisted on calling Benito Mussolini "Old Dutch."

The German invasion came before the Italian people knew it was under way. In fact, not even the German people knew it was under way.

Hitler proceeded by plane to Venice, announcing it as his native city, and pointed out as his birthplace a house that had always been occupied by a family named Spinello.

The sensation of the coup was the way Adolf disposed of Mussolini. He merely announced that there was no such person. For once in his lifetime Mussolini was at a loss for words and before he could grasp the situation, the Italian dictator, always a good situation grabber in the past, was officially declared null and void, and rushed to a prison camp where Hitler had him registered as a couple of other fellows.

Der Fuehrer announced that a man named Schwartzchild, whose first name he couldn't recall, would be the new head of all Italy.

• • • •

Later.

Tokyo.—Flash. Adolf Hitler landed here with an enormous fleet of bombing planes late today, seized the city and dispatched a messenger boy to find the Emperor and tell him he was out of work. He rode through the streets and greeted the amazed Japanese with "Welcome, Germans all!" They seemed quite puzzled, as who wouldn't!

The wildest excitement prevailed, but Hitler announced that it was not really excitement but enthusiasm.

A man named Togi Kumiri rushed up, kissed Adolf on both cheeks and said, "I wanna be known as Max Buxbaum from now on. And can you find me a wife named Lena?"

• • • •

Madrid.—It was announced here this noon that German soldiers had seized the city and that Adolf Hitler had proclaimed himself King of Spain. Spaniards learned from a radio broadcast by Gen. Goebbels that Spain had always been a German nation, that every Spaniard had been hoping to be known as Spiegel for years and that Spain had at last achieved its destiny.

Tomorrow Hitler will address the people. His subject will be (in Spanish), "Welcome, Germans all!"

His agents are here looking up a house to be proclaimed as his birthplace.

• • • •

Somewhere in Central China—Gen. Kiang Kai-shek has received the following message addressed to him, "From One German to Another":

"Don't worry. I have decided to take over China. Dig me up a birthplace, a couple of sound-wagons and some good Chinese schnapps. Adolf."

Paris, France.—The French were startled by a report that Hitler had crossed the border this morning and welcomed all Frenchmen to his arms as Germans. The report is doubted. "He can't be in so many places at one time," said a prominent official today.

Russian Witch Hunt

Stalin Seized On Kirov Murder To Begin Purge Which Has Shaken Entire Soviet To Satisfaction Of Japan And Berlin.

By Joseph H. Baird.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

The author of the following was for several years Moscow correspondent of the United Press.

IT HAS BEEN more than two years now since an inconsequential little clerk in Leningrad, Nicholeyev by name, fired a bullet into the bulky body of Sergei Kirov, Joseph Stalin's best friend and political boss of Russia's second city. I doubt that many American readers remember the name of either. Yet it was this assasination which started Stalin's long "blood purge."

The events of the night in December, 1934, when Kirov was assasinated always will be sharply etched in my mind. Late in the evening I received a telephone call from the official Soviet news agency announcing the Leningrad leader's death. There was just time to catch the midnight express to Leningrad as it was leaving the station.

Next morning in Leningrad, a regiment of soldiers was lined up in front of the station. Thousands of civilians, attracted by the troops, stood at a respectful distance, awaiting they knew not what. Stalin's coming had not been announced. And when, presently, he emerged through the station's portals arm in arm with War Commissar Klementi Voroshilov, a gasp of astonishment went up from the multitude to whom these two figures, daily pictured but almost never seen, were as gods from another world.

Stalin's Leningrad Trip Had Two Purposes.

WHY DID Stalin go to Leningrad when the man second only to him in power has just been assassinated? I hazard two guesses: First, because at the moment he actually did not know what lay behind the assassination—whether there really was a formidable counter-revolution under way—and wanted to satisfy his own mind. Second, because he was determined to show the Russian masses his contempt of danger. (Whatever else one may think of the Soviet leader, his pre-revolutionary and civil war record show that he never lacked physical courage.)

Why, secondly, did Nicholeyev shoot Kirov? Historians, depending on their attitude toward the Stalin regime, may debate this question for decades, for on its answer depends whatever little excuse Stalin may have had for his subsequent actions. I can only recount what I was told in the first blush of excitement before the Soviet propaganda machinery had time to grind out its story of terrorism and plots.

Foreign consuls in Leningrad, men of long residence there with myriad channels of information, factory workers and other non-official sources differed in the details of their stories but united on certain essential facts:

Nicholeyev—so they said—had been one of Kirov's secretaries. He also had been a member in good standing of the Communist Party—which means the difference between prestige and nonentity in Russia. For some reason the two men had quarreled. Kirov dismissed Nicholeyev from his staff and had him expelled from the party. The former secretary, because he was well known to the guards around Kirov's office, was able to enter those closely patrolled quarters and shot his chief in a spirit of personal revenge.

Killing Immediately Described as Political.

HURRIEDLY returning to Moscow, we found workmen already erecting giant pictures of the murdered leader, Stalin, Voroshilov and other notables in preparation for a great state funeral. The controlled Soviet press was filled with identical announcements of a political "assassination."

An "enemy of the people"—so the press dispatches said with singular unanimity—had conspired against the leaders of the proletariat. Already workers in factories and on collective farms were wiring into Moscow their "spontaneous" demands that the villian in Leningrad feel the "stern fist of proletarian justice."

In the days that followed, while the Military Collegium of the Supreme Court debated Nichleyev's fate behind closed doors, the plot, as revealed daily by the Soviet press, expanded in ever-widening circles. There had been discovered a "Leningard center" of which Nicholeyev was only a puny agent, pledged to wipe out Kirov and other leaders. Then the OGPU, prying behind even closer-drawn curtains, descovered a "Moscow center," consecrated to the destruction of Stalin himself and the entire Politbureau.

Within a few weeks more than 100 persons had been shot in expiation of Kirov's death. Daily scare-heads in the press told of "Fascist plots" to wreck Russia by "boring from within." Zinoviev and Kamenev were imprisoned (they were finally shot in 1937). A mad series of arrests began. No Russian felt safe. The Salem witch-hunt of Bolshevism was in full cry.

So much for the initial chapter in the "blood-purge" of the last two years.

To call the roll of those who have perished since—victims of Stalin's mad hunt for all who might conceivably oppose him—is to read the directory of the men who made modern Soviet Russia. The generals, former commissars, Bolshevik theoreticians of prominence who have faced firing squads or entered the gray-green cars with the barred windows bound for Siberia are known to every newspaper reader. I omit them and list here only a few of this writer's peronsal acquaintances—some good friends—who have been shot, exiled or imprisoned during the last two years:

Partial List Of Purge Victims.

KARL RADEK, the "Puck of the Revolution" and the Soviet regime's outstanding journalist.

Paul Mikhailsky, mellow old philosopher, the Soviet press' best informed writer on America, and companion of Lenin during his years in exile.

Jacob Doletzsky, director of the Tass Agency, who perhaps did more than any one man to better the Soviet Union's press relations abroad.

Baron Steiger, contact man between the Russian foreign office and the diplomatic corps in Moscow.

Alexander Neumann, assistant chief of the press bureau and one-time counselor of the Russian Embassy in Washington.

Jacob Podolsky, likewise assistant chief of the press bureau and one-time counselor of the Russian Embassy in Vienna.

George Andreichin, assistant director of Intourist, the Soviet travel agency.

Vladimir Romm, outstanding foreign correspondent of Izvestia, once stationed in Washington.

Now the cables add the names of 18 more to the roll of death—among them three former commissars, Rykov, Yagoda and Rosengoltz, and Nicholai Bucharin, whose editorial columns in Izvestia daily thundered against Stalin's enemies.

Their fate is known. But what has been the result of the "blood purge" on Stalin and on Soviet Russia?

When, in December, 1934, the Stalin regime used the incident of Kirov's assassination as an excuse to wipe out a few hundred persons it considered politically dangerous, observers thought that the matter would end there. But suspicion feeds on itself. And there are many indications today that Stalin, once the "Man of Steel," has worked himself into a state or morbid suspicion which borders on the pathological. Some of the charges made against the defendants in the last trial—for instance, that Maxim Gorky, ill and decrepit for a decade, was hurried to his death by enemies of the state—reached new heights of absurdity.

It will be recalled that Japan's invasion of China, with its threat to Soviet Siberia, occurred last summer just after Stalin's regime had announced to the world that the Red army's high command was honeycombed with traitors, that Russian industry was filled with saboteurs.

The Japanese general staff, ever skillful in timing, then tested Russia's mettle by invading Bolshoi Island, in the Amur River, long claimed by the Soviets. Moscow became indignant, then wilted. Japan concluded that it had nothing to fear from the Red army if it chose to invade China. If, indeed, the whole Stalin regime was undermined by spies and traitors, why should it?

And there are those who say that Hitler, Stalin's sworn arch-enemy, in delaying his drive to the East, is merely biding his time against the day when the present regime will weaken, if not destroy itself.

Poland Imitates Hitler.

IT IS NO MERE coincidence that Hitler's coup in Austria has been followed so speedily by enormously increased German-Italian activity in Spain, one manifestation of which is the incredibly savage bombardment of Barcelona, and now by Poland's brutal thrust in the direction of Lithuania.

These events stem from the same source. With effective barriers to aggression lacking, the powerful are today in a position to prey on the weak with impunity. And they are doing so with a vengeance. In its attitude toward Lithuania the Polish government is manifesting the same complete disregard of civilized standards of international conduct displayed by Hitler in Austria and by Hitler and Mussolini in Spain.

• • • •

"THE FRONTIERS are artificially closed," said a recent headline in the Wieczor Warszawski, a newspaper published in the Polish capital, "the doors will be opened by force."

That expresses the situation in a nutshell. "Be our friends," say the Poles to the Lithuanians, "or we'll bash in your heads." The parallel with the way Anschluss was brought about between Germany and Austria and with what Japan demands from China at is striking.

It is clear that in taking the very strong line she has toward Lithuania, Poland feels certain that no one will come to Lithuania's support.

The League is a cipher. Germany is more than willing to let Poland go ahead and may, indeed, have egged on the Warsaw government with whom her relations have been very intimate during the past four years, to seek compensation in Lithuania and, if feasible, bring about an Anschluss of her own.

After all, Poland and Lithuania were once united in one kingdom. Russia is separate from Lithuania by Poland and Latvia. Great Britain's pleas for moderation can be discounted. Who cares these days what Neville Chamberlain says? And Poland's ally, France, has far too many other headaches to do anything except exert moral pressure on the Warsaw regime.

• • • •

SO MARSHAL SMIGLY-RYDZ, who for some years has been rattling around in the over-large boots of the late Josef Pilsudski, may have a cheap victory at a time when he and his colleagues badly need it.

Poland's internal situation, none too happy during the recovery years, has become very bad indeed because of the recession. With a budget badly unbalanced, Poland, like every other nation, finds it necessary to expand her armaments. Hitherto France has been of some help in this regard. But Poland's dubious international policy as conducted by Col. Josef Beck has tended to alienate the French while the ghastly mistreatment of the Ukrainian, Jewish and other minorities has increased social tensions in the east European republic.

To be perfectly fair to Poland, however, it is not what the Warsaw government demands of Lithuania as much as the way it is going about implementing its demands that is outrageous. There is a parallel in this with the Austrian situation. A union between Austria and Germany by the voluntary consent of both parties would have been one thing; the brutal manner in which Hitler forced this union is something else again.

• • • •

EVER SINCE Gen Zeligowski's coup in Vilna, in 1920, which led to Poland's annexation of that ancient city and its surrounding area Lithuania has refused to recognize Polish sovereignty over Vilna, Lithuania's ancient capital. And she has refused to open the border separating her from Poland to traffic of any kind.

That this state of affairs has been irksome to Poland is understandable. But that Lithuania's attitude gives the Warsaw government any real justification for forcible action against her tiny neighbor is certainly open to question.

Lithuania it appears certain will capitulate to the Polish demands. But that Poland will, in the long run, gain more than a temporary victory from Lithuania's capitulation is dubious.

If the law of the jungle continues to rule in Europe, and Poland by her action is helping to make that true, Poland will not be the least of those adversely affected by the situation.

Wedged in as she is between Germany on the one hand and Russia on the other, Poland must depend for the maintenance of her territorial integrity on (a) her own unaided efforts or (b) her own force plus those of nations prepared to ally themselves with her or (c) the restraints manifested by her neighbors either because of the fear of Poland's might or because they and all other nations are convinced that the rule of law is the wisest for all concerned.

• • • •

GERMANY, certainly, cannot be expected to manifest any such restraint. The Austrian case proves that up to the hilt. And the fact cannot be ignored that in the Polish Corridor, which separates East Prussia from the rest of the Reich in what was once Posen, and in Upper Silesia, one of Europe's most important mineral and metallurgical areas, Poland possesses territory that once was Germany's and that Germany still covets.

For the time being Germany is prepared to pay for Poland's friendship by shelving her demands regarding the Corridor, Posen and Upper Silesia. Indeed she has done just that since 1934. But will an enlarged and increasingly powerful Reich be prepared to continue indefinitely the bargain then made? The indications would certainly seem to be in the negative.

At some undetermined time in the future, therefore, Poland may find herself isolated in the position of Austria or of that of Lithuania. And with France isolated, which is what Hitler plans to achieve as speedily as possible, there will be none that Poland will be able to look to. Thus, in putting another nail in the coffin of peaceful international methods and collective security, by her high-handed tactics toward Lithuania, Poland may ultimately be sealing her own doom.

"With what little wisdom," said Oxenstierne a long time ago," is the world governed." He was never more right than now.

Windsor In War

From the London Leader

Bombproofing The Famous Castle.

GOSSIP that Windsor Castle is to be provided with bomb-resisting romos reveals some more interesting facts about the future of this historic pile.

Less and less is Windsor Castle likely to be used as a royal residence, and eventually it may be given up altogether. Both King George and Queen Elizabeth, while appreciating the centuries-old palace, realize that it is not and never can be comparable with the modern and up-to-date conveniences of the other royal houses.

Great vaults, which extend for considerable distances beneath the castle, will be used in the future as air-raid shelters for valuable art and other treasures and vital records, shouid Britain ever be engaged in any future war.

• • • •

IT MAY BE recalled that during the last war several pictures from the National Portrait Galleries, together with the royal regalia from the Tower of London and many other valuables, were stored in the lower and underground portions of the great keep.

Few people know that there is a sort of gentlemen's agreement among the monarchs of the world that in the event of war no royal palaces are to be attacked from the air. Kaiser Wilhelm issued definite instructions to his sky raiders that Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle and Sandringham should be immune from bombs.

Special chambers are, however, now being prepared for practically the whole of the nation's treasures, together with the national archives from the rolls office, the various government departments and several galleries and museums.

When the work now in progress is concluded, early in 1938, it is believed that these vaults will be invulnerable to attack.

Excerpts From 2d TVA Hearing

President Again Fails To Secure Answers To Questions.

Excerpts from the record of the second conference President Roosevelt had yesterday at the White House with TVA Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, Vice Chairman Harcourt A. Morgan and Director David E. Lilienthal, follow:

PRESIDENT: Gentlemen, we shall now proceed with the investigation that was adjourned a week ago. First of all, I would like to say a few words by way of emphasizing again the controlling considerations which governed the hearing of last week, considerations which I stated at that time.

I am holding this hearing pursuant to the responsibility of the authority imposed upon me as the Chief Executive faithfully to carry out the laws of the United States. That is a constitutional duty. In that capacity I have a direct and primary responsibility for the honest and effective administration of the executive and administrative branches of the Government.

In this case serious charges have been made by one member of the Tennessee Valley Authority against his two fellow directors, and in turn serious charges have been made by the other two directors against Chairman Morgan. It is my duty both to investigate the truth of the charges and to take appropriate action based on the facts of this investigation. The President does not have the sole responsibility for actual administration but he has a primary and direct responsibility.

• • • •

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Mr. President, I should like to make a statement of my position which will require about 10 minutes.

PRESIDENT: It will be necessary for me to exercise my discretion in interrupting you as you go on, if you do not confine yourself strictly to answers in regard to facts.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Mr. President, at the last period that same statement was made and I was interrupted when I tried to make a three-minute statement. Later, in the meeting, long legal arguments were given without interruption and opinions on the meaning of legislation, etc. I have a statement which will require about 10 minutes and I would greatly appreciate the opportunity to make that without interruption.

PRESIDENT: I shall be forced to interrupt, Chairman Morgan, if you do not confine yourself to facts.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: This statement is as follows: Mr. President, at the conference held with you last Friday, I stated that I could not participate for the reason that such a procedure could not bring out the many pertinent facts which must necessarily be considered in order to arrive at an informed and correct conclusion. I stated that the meeting was not and could not be a useful fact-finding occasion.

He Still Refuses To Present Facts

PRESIDENT: I must therefore ask, Chairman Morgan, that if such a continuation of this or a similar inquiry is held, will you present such facts on these questions as you have or are able to bring out and answer the questions put to you?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Mr. President, until I came here this morning, it had not occurred to me that a section of the TVA act which was included for a certain specific purpose—that of discovering improprieties at Muscle Shoals before the enactment of the TVA law—that that section might be used for other purposes that were not intended when it was passed.

• • • •

PRESIDENT: Wait a minute, are you in a position today—I give you full opportunity to present any facts which you claim you had no opportunity to present with the three members of the committee.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I would like to finish my statement.

PRESIDENT: Please answer my question. I asked you a question.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I am not in a position to do so at the present moment. I was not told by Secretary McIntyre that I should bring papers and briefs.

PRESIDENT: Would you be ready tomorrow morning?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: No.

PRESIDENT: Would you be ready Wednesday

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: It would take a longer period.

PRESIDENT: How long a period? Can you do it in a week?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Not altogether.

PRESIDENT: Can you do in two weeks?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I cannot answer that offhand. I will continue with my statement. In the Berry case, I asked the President's secretary whether I could go to one of his confidential advisers——

PRESIDENT: Who?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Charlie West, and present matters to him—if that would be a satisfactory presentation.

PRESIDENT: When did you ask this?

Sought to Avoid Embarrassing Issue

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I think in 1936. I went over the situation very fully with him—the Berry situation—and——

THE PRESIDENT: Why didn't you come to me?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I had two reasons for not coming to you. I did mention the matter to you, as you remember. You asked me if I should give you all the facts and I said I believed that I could take care of it personally. I did not present the facts because it would be embarrassing. I thought we could well handle that situation ourselves.

THE PRESIDENT: Why did you go to the Undersecretary of the Interior?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Because it was generally assumed he was very close to you.

THE PRESIDENT: Did anybody tell you to go to him?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I called Secretary McIntyre to see if that was a satisfactory course for me to take. He said, "Certainly, by all means," emphatically, something like that.

THE PRESIDENT: Did he tell you he had my approval?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I didn't consider he gave me that advice unless he had your approval.

THE PRESIDENT: Did you know that that was the correct procedure for you to pursue?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I had two motives for taking that action, one, because of the burden on your time, the other was that by approaching him—I did not know whether he talked to you or not.

MR. LILIENTHAL: Mr. President, may I call attention to the fact that on the second page of the transcript of last week's hearing, the President stated the basis upon which in part this investigation was conducted—as follows: "The TVA act," quoting from the President, "authorizes the President to investigate and gives him a method of investigating when he may deem proper, the management of any property owned by the Government in the Tennessee Valley Basin, to determine whether or not Government has been injured or deprived of any of its rights." That is the end of the quote from the President that was stated at the very outset in basis as a part of the President's inquiry.

PRESIDENT: That was, of course, a quotation from section 17. In other words, Chairman Morgan, I must repeat again that I have the inherent authority to pursue with this inquiry further on two grounds: First, the general authority which is inherent in the office of the President, and secondly, section 17 of the act. I can proceed under either or both. It is my purpose to make every effort to proceed under either or both.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: May I ask—until today there had been no mention of section 17 and that I recalled that I recognized or that I saw the significance of. It is my full intent——

• • • •

PRESIDENT: On page two of the transcript of the record last Friday, a week ago, I repeat the following sentence: "As President, I have special concern in the charges that have been made and that reflect not simply upon the judgment but upon the personal integrity and official conduct of members of the board and the management of Government property." That is, Chairman Morgan, a clear statement of my inherent powers that go with the office. That is followed up by a specific power, the TVA act itself, and I quote the next sentence of what I said to you a week ago: "The TVA act authorizes the President to investigate and gives him a method of investigating when he may deem proper the management of any property owned by the Govrnmnt in the Tennessee Valley Basin to determine whether or not Government has been injured or deprived of any of its rights."

You can have, therefore, no claim to surprise after a week has elapsed.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: That rlates to one phase of our investigation only, where the safety of Government property is involved.

PRESIDENT: To resume a summary of the present situation, the President because of the obligations of his office or through section 17 of the TVA act, or both, is compelled to ask that charges of dishonesty and want of integrity by Chairman Morgan be sustained. It is necessary on the face of the record as it stands today for me to say that on the record as it stands today, Chairman Arthur Morgan has failed to sustain such charges of dishonesty and want of integrity.

Must Accept Charges On Morgan as True

On the face of the record as it stands today the charges of the other directors, that Chairman Morgan has obstructed and sabotaged the work of the Tennessee Valley Authority must be accepted as true, Chairman Morgan having refused to offer testimony in denial of the charges. On the record as it stands today Chairman Morgan has shown by his refusal to answer questions relating to any facts which he may have relied on at the time of making charges of dishonesty and want of integrity against his fellow directors, that, on the record as it stands today—he is guilty of contumacy in his refusal. Therefore, as the case stands today, no further evidence can be brought out today because of the attitude of Chairman Morgan and secondly, on the evidence which has been presented and on the refusal to submit evidence on the part of Chairman Morgan, some action must be taken in the public interest. One final question of Chairman Morgan: I stand ready to proceed this afternoon or tomorrow or Monday or Tuesday with a continuation of this hearing in order to give you opportunity to present any factual information or evidence in substantiation of the charges that you have made. I propose to proceed either under my duty as Chief Executive or under section 17, whichever method you prefer. Will you be ready to resume?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: You have put questions to me that I cannot answer on the spur of the moment. I will give them my most careful and immediate consideration and answer you with the utmost promptness as quickly as I possibly can.

PRESIDENT: Can you give me an answer by tomorrow?

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I don't know; the statements you put to me are of far-reaching importance and implication, and just how long it will take me, with all due diligence, to come to a conclusion I cannot say on the spur of the moment.

PRESIDENT: Can you give me some idea, Chairman Morgan, as to when you can give an answer to the last question I have asked you? I think, in fairness to myself, you owe it to me to tell me today when I will have that answer. (Pause.)

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I would say within a week. As to whether what I can say you would consider an answer—I will do my best to answer as soon as possible and I should think a week would be as near as——

PRESIDENT (interrupting): Chairman Morgan, I cannot, in view of the simplicity of the question I have put to you—I cannot give you a week to tell me whether you are going to answer that question. It is a question which obviously calls for a yes or no answer. I shall ask the stenographer to read it again.

Promises He Won't Waste Any Time

(The question was then read again to Chairman Morgan.)

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: Under the stress of the moment I cannot arrive at a sound judgment of the inference of these statements. I will use full diligenee and waste no time and give you an answer just as quickly as I can. I can say that I will do it within a week; I will do it in much less time if it is possible.

PRESIDENT: Chairman Morgan, that question is of such utter simplicity, so clear, a question merely asking you whether you are willing to proceed with this inquiry, either under my general powers or under the TVA Act, that I cannot conceivably imagine why longer consideration is necessary. This matter, as has been shown by your own statement, goes back at least to January, 1937. There is a simple question which must be answered and on which you have had over over a year to make up your mind. It is a simple question as to whether you are willing to answer questions by the President of the United States or his legally authorized assistants or not. Investigation of a record is unnecessary. Consultation with your friends is unnecessary. A matter of grave public concern confronts both of us. I have a duty to perform. I have asked you to co-operate with me in the performance of that duty.

I regret it, but I think it now being 1:30 on Friday, I can give you only until Monday at noon to answer that question. That give you two full days, until Monday at 1:30, and then it will be 72 hours—on Monday at 1:30, which is 72 hours—to make up your mind as to whether you are going to co-operate in this inquiry or whether you are going to decline. And, when you do it—when you give me this answer at 1:30 on Monday, I want you to say "Yes" or "No." It has reached that point now. I don't want a long explanation as to why you do not want to appear before the President of the United States, or appear under section 17 of the act. I want to know on 1:30 on Monday as to whether you are going to be guilty of contumacy by refusing to appear in a continuation of this inquiry, or whether you are going to appear and answer the questions which are going to be put to you.

CHAIRMAN MORGAN: I also have grave public responsibility. The question does not seem simple to me. It is my full intent to do my full duty under the TVA act and under the United States Government. I will do my best with all speed and——(pausing)

PRESIDENT (interposing): I shall require an answer to this question to be in my hands by 1:30 p. m. on Monday, March 21.

(The conference was adjourned at 1:30 o'clock p. m., to reconvene on Monday, March 21, 1938, at 1:30 o'clock p. m.)

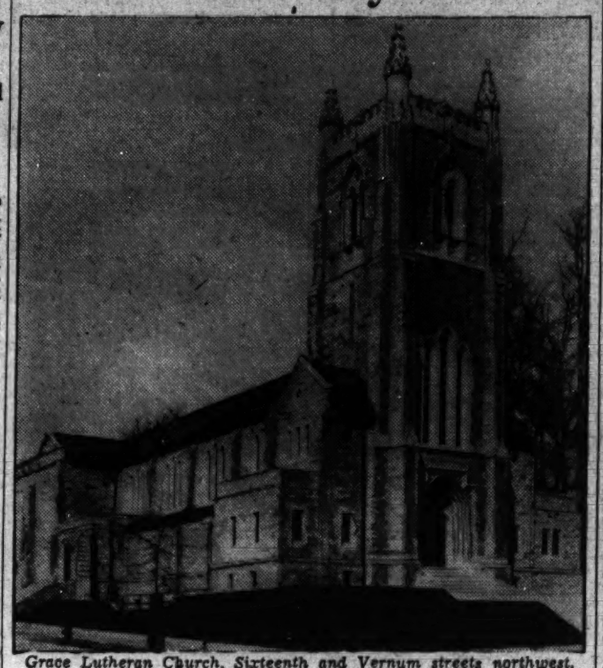
Grace Lutheran Celebrates 60th Anniversary This Week



Grace Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Vernum streets northwest.

Sixteenth Street Church, in Third and Present Building for Ten Years, Has Had Only Three Ministers in Long History.

Grace Lutheran Church, which formally celebrated its sixtieth anniversary this week, has occupied three buildings and has been served by but three ministers during its long history.

The congregation first met in a chapel on Thirteenth street northwest at the foot of Corcoran street. Its second building was the stone church on the same site, which now is occupied by the Mount Gilead Baptist Church, colored. This week it celebrates not only its sixtieth birthday but the tenth anniversary of the dedication of its present building at Sixteenth and Varnum streets northwest.

Grace Lutheran's first pastor, the Rev. E. G. Tressel, served from 1877 to 1892. The term of his successor, the Rev. J. E. A. Doermann, extended until 1919, and the present pastor, the Rev. Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, has served since 1920.

The church was organized by a group of young men and women who had been members of the German Lutheran Church, Trinity Congregation, which still is located at Fourth and E streets northwest. The group's purpose was to found an American church which would employ the English language. Although Grace Lutheran always has attracted members of many nationalities, the language of worship still is English.

Five new churches have been started under the guidance of Grace as mother church. They are St. Matthew's, Fifteenth street and Kentucky avenue, of which the Rev. Theodore Fricke is now pastor; the Takoma Park Lutheran Church, Seventh and Dahlia streets, now served by the Rev. Adrian Pfeiffer; Faith Church of Arlington, Va., served by the Rev. George Grewenow; Christ Church of Bethesda, Md., the Rev. Henry Whiting, and St. Luke's, Derwood, Md., the Rev. Otis Propst.

The church membership has doubled in the last ten years. The present congregational home was built under Dr. Lenski's leadership in 1928. The memorial organ, recently dedicated, was presented by Mrs. Mary Troutman, of Butler, Pa. Other memorials include a marble altar, carved pulpit and several stained glass windows.

Bishop Freeman to Deliver 3d Lenten Sermon Tomorrow

'Christ and the World Today' to Be Subject for Cathedral Evensong; Canon Jones to Preach in Morning.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., LL. D., Bishop of Washington, will deliver his third sermon on the Lenten theme, "Christ and the World Today," at the people's evensong service in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 4 o'clock.

Canon Everett H. Jones, chancellor of the cathedral and assistant to the warden of the College of Preachers, will preach at the celebration of Holy Communion at 11 a. m. on "Facing the Crises of Life."

Music for both these services will be furnished by the cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Robert G. Barrow, who will play the new cathedral organ.

Services for the day will begin with celebrations of the Holy Communion at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m. in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Holy Nativity.

The public officials and people of Oklahoma and Oregon will be remembered in prayer at the cathedral altar tomorrow in connection with the "Union of States" plan which is being furthered by women's committees of the National Cathedral Association.

Reply Service To Be Resumed By Dr. Pruden

"The Winsomeness of Jesus" will be the subject on which Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow in First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets northwest.

In the evening he plans to continue his series of talks on "Frank Answers to Frequent Questions." His topic will be "Does Christ Save?"

A group from the Euzelian Class will present a program at the children's emergency home, Central Union Mission, tonight.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Edward O. Clark will preach on "Giving That Glorifies," at 11 a. m.

Takoma Park Baptist. Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, will be the guest preacher at the morning service tomorrow. At the evening hour Horace L. Stevenson, will be the guest speaker. The pastor, the Rev. William E. La Rue, will be absent because of a meeting of the social service commission of the Southern Baptist Convention, at Atlanta, Ga., of which he is a member.

FOR EVERYONE OF EVERY FAITH FROM EVERYWHERE

Conformers or Transformers?

By the Rev. Everett H. Jones,
Canon and Chancellor, Washington Cathedral.

Romans 12:2—"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."

When we go back in history to the early Christians we find that they did not have many things we have today. They did not have our fine churches and our beautiful music. They didn't have our far-flung organization throughout the world. But they did have something far more important. They had the courage to defy the world in order to be true to their convictions. They dared to be different. They were willing to be thought peculiar, even mad. They were not afraid to be shut up in prison or to be thrown to the lions. In short, they did not conform to the world, but they transformed the world.

Rev. Everett H. Jones.

Here is a brief summary of why we are where we are. We have vaguely assumed that we live in a Christian world. We speak of our Christian civilization. It is a misnomer. We have a civilization touched by Christ, perhaps moving toward Him. But it is still far from Him. How far from Him it is we are forced to realize when we face the daily facts of war and racial hatred and economic greed and personal infidelity. We have forgotten that the creative power of the Christian church comes only through heroic conflict between itself and the world. We are not conformed; we are transformers!

The central mystery of the Christian religion is that a man can be transformed by God through Christ. He can be made over so that he is in the world but not of it. This miracle takes place in the soul in order that the Christian may then go forth to become a transforming power wherever he is, "Ye are the light of the world." "Ye are the salt of the earth." Power will return to Christians when they dare to be what God calls them to be—transformers instead of conformers.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Divorcee Sulks Because Married Suitor Lacks Funds to Hasten His Divorce; What Is He to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a young lady for two years and during that time I have paid no attention to other women. I am married and have a son to support which takes one-third of my salary of $1,200 a year. This is my problem: For over a year after we met, this young lady and I got along fine. We never quarreled and neither of us was jealous. Then, about six months ago, she was granted a divorce, whereupon she insisted that I get my divorce as soon as possible. However, I haven't been able to save enough money to pay for a divorce, but she insists I don't want one and am just wasting her time.

• • • •

Now, Miss Haworth, I really think she would make a lovely little wife, but she doesn't seem to understand me and I have discovered she is extremely jealous of me, and wherever we go nowadays we end up with an argument. Then, too, I have found it very hard to keep up a conversation with her. She likes to see things her way. For instance, a few weeks ago my club gave a dance, and as I was responsible for seeing that everybody had a good time, and there were 50 guests present, I was unable to give her as much attention as I should. She got mad because I danced with an old friend I had known in school, and went home alone.

• • • •

The next day I went to see her and wasn't there 20 minutes when one of her old boy friends whom she said she hadn't seen for a year, dropped in to see her. I overlooked that and she seemed to think it was all right for another man to call on her, although that was the first time I had seen any other man there. A few days later, she happened to be at my house when I was called to the telephone and it was an old girl friend of mine. I wouldn't tell her who it was, because I was sure it would start an argument. I did tell her it was a boy friend of mine, which she didn't believe. And now she is angry again. So what shall I do? Shall I break off with her or try to make her see things my way? Please answer soon. T. H.

• • • •

What to Believe.

DEAR T. H.: Persons who are not sufficiently mature to be able to entertain amicable differences of opinion on general topics, and who cannot adjust vital differences by frank and friendly discussion, are not mature enough, as a rule, to make a success of marriage. The person who must have things his way, and who insists upon forcing his viewpoint on others, is a spoiled child, regardless of adult stature and voting age. I should say your ladylove's conduct shows rather clearly why her first marriage went on the rocks; and suggests that both of you, in discarding former partners for each other, may find yourselves out of the frying pan and into the fire.

• • • •

Surely you know that mutual trust is the most indispensable plank in the whole platform of marriage. If this woman today cannot trust the honesty of your intentions toward her, not to mention your loyalty and veracity; and if she is so unreasonable that she cannot concede the fact that it takes money to get a divorce; and that surplus cash is a virtually non-existent item in the budget of a man who must support two camps, so to speak, on $1,200 a year, I think it very doubtful that she would make you "a lovely little wife." If she has you so intimidated already that you believe it necessary to lie in order to avoid argument with her, she can hardly be considered an elevating influence.

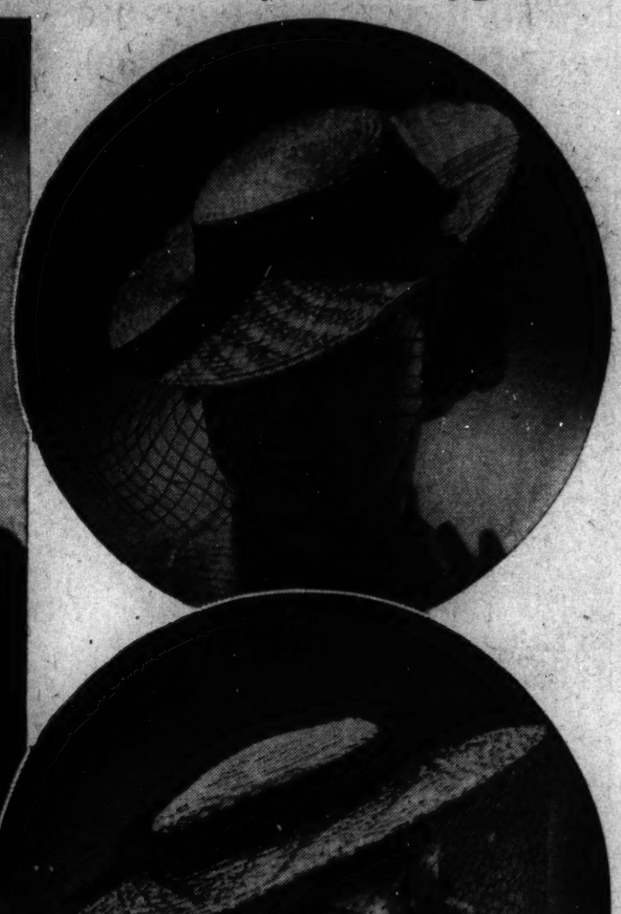
• • • •

In my opinion, both of you are acting like 15-year-olds, and I daresay if a social-age test were taken, that is just about what you would prove to be, so far as your mental and psychological development is concerned. And I reiterate this very immaturity was probably responsible for the failure of your respective marriages. I can only suggest, for you, that you begin to practice from this day forth such mature habits of personality as honesty of statement, honor and courage in conduct, deliberate self-control in the face of temptation to anger, and a clear-eyed capacity for looking before you leap, or—shall we say?—for weighing the pros and cons of any course of action before committing yourself to it.

• • • •

If you cannot trust this girl in her relations with other men, that is reason enough for not marrying her. If she refuses to understand your problems, to give you mental assistance and moral support in solving them, again you shouldn't marry her. If, as a result of association with her, you find yourself increasingly departing from self-respecting standards of manly conduct—through lying, deceiving, abjectly apologizing when you have done nothing which requires apology; through entertaining suspicions; through seeking petty revenge of the tit-for-tat sort; through quarreling over trifles; through giving up valued friendships for no reason except to placate her—you should not marry her. To marry any person who does not, by his example and by his implicit confidence in one's essential decency, constantly inspire one to become, every day and in every way, a bigger and better personality, is—in 99 cases out of 100—to sell one's birthright of freedom for a mess of pottage. For where there is no growth, there is usually regression. Life never, in any of its forms, just stands still. M. H.

Sailors Accompany Costumes of All Types



TOP, left, is a smart suit sailor of navy zanzibar straw with red accents; a chin strap lends jauntiness. A Mexican sailor (left) of baku with flaming red brim facing; chin strap may be either tied under chin or at back of the head. Natural jaipur straw is a perky sailor (top, right), navy veil and grosgrain band for color contrast. All three hats by Harryson. Above, is the merry widow sailor by G. Hodward Hodge, of natural tuscan straw with "duster" veil arrangement.

Dame Fashion Rules Sailor Hats Are Mandatory Wear This Spring

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

If you haven't a sailor hat this spring you might just as well go into seclusion, they are that popular. Small sailors, large versions and those so miniature, they are scarcely a hat at all—are appearing everywhere. The social status of the sailor hat also has changed; it can accompany clothes of almost any type according to current style dictums.

Straw is the leading medium for fashioning all kinds of sailor chapeaux, although felt and soft materials are also much in evidence. Trimming varies with the type of sailor and the clothes it is to complement. For instance, feathers and grosgrain bands and bows for sailors of the more tailored classification; flowers and flowing veils for the more formal versions.

A sailor hat is just as smart as the way it is worn; some may be worn any of the several ways, others are designed to be worn in just one fashion and are not smart if this idea is not followed. Sailors this season are worn straight on the head; tilted on one side; or, down over the forehead. It all depends upon the sailor—and your own individuality.

Many of the chic sailors for spring may lead a dual existence and serve for various occasions by the mere changing of accents. For example, substituting flowers for tailored feathers, or adding a long swishy veil, tied in the back of the head or under the chin, when the hat is to be worn with afternoon costumes. Another interesting feature about the sailor hats this season, there is an interpretation to suit every type of face and figure—and every age from 6 to 60. And, they are all smart.

Stage Aspirants Must Have Grit, Says Ethel Colt

Ethel Barrymore's Daughter Says She 'Just Plugs Along.'

By Nancy Archibald.

WHEN ASKED what it takes for a young girl to get ahead in a stage career, Miss Ethel Colt, daughter of famed Ethel Barrymore, settled down over her cup of tea at the Hay-Adams House and talked with enthusiasm on this, her pet subject.

"The great trouble about these bright young people who want a stage career is that most of them are not deeply serious," she said. "They choose the stage because they can think of nothing better and approach a career in such a casual manner. You wouldn't expect a violinist to play the instrument because the sudden notion hit him. I remember hearing a fond mother remark of her child whom she had just seen perform at a little theater, 'My dear, my daughter just played the role of Maggie in "What Every Woman Knows" and I assure you she did better than Helen Hayes! Now you wouldn't hear anyone compare a daughter's work with Galli Curci . . .'"

Settling the point of the dignity of acting, Miss Colt went on to outline the course of a modern career. "First you must want to act more than anything in the world," she declared. "Then you must study. While you can never actually learn drama—you have to be born with the talent—you can learn physical things such as diction and graceful motion. A good dramatic school with a professional approach should be attended. Nowadays, there are few stock companies in which a girl can gain experience. Europe offers much wider opportunities in stock, France and Russia especially. But there are a number of splendid summer stock companies where you can become an apprentice the first season and have a chance at a job working with established stars the next. After that you hope to be seen by directors or talent scouts. The final stage is going to New York and haunting the casting offices."

The first part is surrounded by many pitfalls that may trap a beginner before they can gain a foothold, Miss Colt explained. "A small part does not mean you have arrived," she said, "You must keep on studying, perfecting your technique so that your performance is so easy and natural that the audience believes it spontaneous. If not an art, dramatics should be prepared for like a craft or profession such as law or even stenography."

Asked if the great Barrymore tradition did not cramp her style a little, make her self-conscious and anxious to live up to the name, Miss Colt declared she never hoped to achieve her forbear's greatness and never thought about it. "I just plow along with my work doing my very best and learning something new every day," she said. "You can learn a great deal by watching others. I just came back from watching Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne do 'The Seagulls' over in Baltimore. I had seen another company [illegible] in London and I found the comparison most instructive . . . That's what I mean, you see, young hopefuls should plug and research and think of acting even outside working hours. It is one of the most absorbing pursuits a person could take up."

Trailer Fashions Receive Attention Of Style Experts

Chicago (U.P.).—What the well-dressed woman who lives in a trailer should wear has received the attention of costume designers who, in the previews, are offering natty little numbers for early morning wear and smart pique two-piece suits for "informal at homes" in the trailer camp.

The trailer dweller, who does her morning work as she jolts along the highway, may have her choice of a variety of denim overalls, complete with zipper fasteners. She may have overalls with or without matching coat. Designers point out the overall suit is just the thing for the woman who combines tire changing and the like with household chores.

For a social season in a trailer camp, designers have turned out dark cotton outfits in all the novelty weaves with the recommendation that they are "simple to get into, allow freedom and movement, slow to show soil and easy to launder."

Most of the styles, both frocks and dress and shorts combinations, were in the "California" colors—bright blues, sultry yellows and dusky reds.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Temporary Check in Poundage Loss Is to Be Expected.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SO YOU haven't lost a pound in the last two weeks! You have been clipping off the pounds at the satisfying rate of one to two pounds per week when suddenly things take a turn for the worse. Diet and exercise seem all in vain; the stubborn pounds will not budge!

This is a discouraging state of affairs, reducers, but it may help you to keep on with your diet to know that this weight standstill is to be expected after two months on a reducing program. This is no time to give up, however, for it is only a temporary halt. Stick with your diet and you will, sooner or later, begin losing again.

What makes this lull so discouraging is that, as a rule, the first 10 to 20 pounds come off fairly easily. There are several reasons for this, the most obvious being the ease with which the soft fat is broken down. When you reach the more compact fat, whether it is after the loss of 5, 10 or 20 pounds, you begin to lose weight more slowly. A stationary period always marks the end of the initial weight loss.

Calorie Adjustment.

Of course, the overweight whose fat is all of the compact type loses slowly even at the beginning of her program.

One explanation of the lull in losing is that in several weeks on a diet the energy requirement may be adjusted to a lower calorie level. To some extent nature may adapt your calorie needs to the reduced level of your food intake. As a result, on the same diet you draw slightly less on stored fat and therefore lose weight more slowly.

Or, in your case, the explanation may be the reaccumulation of water in the tissues. Water storage is most likely to occur at the beginning of a reducing program but you have no assurance that water will not reaccumulate in the tissues. Those of you who did not lose weight for a week or so at the beginning of your program because of water retention may find yourselves up against the same problem again. When this occurs, it is not unusual, in spite of low calorie diet, to lose no weight at all for a week or two and then suddenly to lose as much as 6 pounds almost overnight. After the initial weight loss, this phenomenon usually recurs. Water reaccumulates in the tissues and you reach a weight plateau, but it will be followed by a rapid weight decline.

Whatever the cause, this stationary period is a normal part of every reducing program. After an initial weight loss you may not lose again for one to three weeks. During this time don't let your efforts come to a standstill, too. Keep right on with your exercise so that you will lose inches even though you do not lose pounds. At no other time is exercise so important to your reducing program.

As for your diet, a return to the "Fruit and Vegetable Regime" will give you a fresh start on reducing. Follow these menus for two consecutive days next week and again for two consecutive days the following week if necessary. When you do begin to lose, one-fourth to one pound per week will be excellent progress.

To take off inches as well as pounds—keep up your exercises.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 18.

EVERY TIME our gourmets, or fancy eaters, get together for one of their gastronomic orgies, a good story develops—especially if they have a clever headline-minded speaker as honor guest. The most recent of these magnificent munches was no exception.

ALICE HUGHES

The Gourmet Society gathered for luncheon the other day at our famous Caviar Restaurant, with President J. George Frederick in the chair. As usual, a noble repast was daintily pushed toward the members, the piece de risistance being Diamond-Backed Terrapin Baltimore. The affair proceeded with all the ritual common to the society's meetings. Then, after the demi tasse and burgundy had been properly savored, Gilbert Seldes, writer and radio pundit, arose to give the oration of the day.

Brother Seldes made an exceptionally interesting talk. His general subject was Food as a Social Weapon—especially as torture. And he said quite a few, did Gilbert.

He made several points on the chastisement of enemies invited in for chow. Have you considered humiliating or annoying people merely by serving them food?" he asked the startled epicures. "For people of the type who try to embarrass others, there is revenge in embarrassing them with food. You can serve them crunchy food that they cannot eat silently—or fibrous food that will stick in their teeth—or food that is difficult to chase around the plate."

• • • •

But let us draw a charitable veil over the brother's remarks. This will give you an idea of meal-time cruelty refined past belief. I will only add that he thought another fine mean trick would be to serve the loveliest of viands with a heavy cabbage odor pouring from the kitchen. Isn't that a honey?

They're a pretty delicate and finicky lot, these gourmets of ours. I don't think they'll welcome many such revolutionary speakers as Comrade Seldes. His speech was original and amusing—but after all, gentleman, after all!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Julia Coburn, who gave up fashion editing this year to direct our School of Fashion Careers with Miss Tobe, has just attended her first educational convention at Atlantic City—and had to learn a brand new language to replace the jargon of the style business, which we who use it find so limited and hampering. The more Julie studied the convention program, the more terrified she grew. Hardly a word ran less than three good syllables, and she found that the favorite educational word of the year is "integration." Teachers just have to integrate—and Julie will probably get as fed-up with that as we do with "smart" and "soigne." And that's awfully fed . . .

The recent death of Gabriele D'Annunzio set oldsters to remembering the poet's long and ill-starred romance with the greatest actress of our time, Eleanora Duse, and also reminded us that his youngest son, Capt. Ugo D'Annunzio, has been a quiet, active businessman here in town these many years, and an American citizen since '24 . . .

• • • •

I've told you before how the town officials here have been driving hand-organs, and especially our little German brass bands, off the public streets recently. Yet the music makers persist, and only the other day a sextet of brass-blowing Teutons was hailed before Magistrate Troy, a good Irishman. At lunch time the band gave a rousing rendition of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." "Guilty of disorderly conduct," said his honor, "but I suspend sentence!" And so again the art of music triumphed—and another little German band was safe for our streets, until the next zealous copper picks them up!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Greek Meets Greek.

"I hope you won't think I'm being personal, Mr. DeVasher, but—haven't you lived abroad?"

"Well, ye-es. What makes you think so?"

"Oh, there's something different about you—a sort of continental air. Especially when you're around women."

"Thank you. I think a lot of men don't take the trouble to try to understand women. Will you pardon me if I say something personal, Miss Gibb?"

"Oh certainly."

"Do you know that you have a very unusual personality?"

"In what way?"

"Well, you may not know it, but you're a very primitive woman."

"Me!"

"Yes! You may think you're very sophisticated—conventional. Well, you're not! You're 100 per cent female! You're primitive!"

"You really think so?"

"Absolutely. Now understand me. I'm not critjcizing you. I like fire in a woman."

"Well, I suppose I am very intense—down underneath."

"Yes, if you ever fell in love, you'd be very hard to handle."

"You have such an amazing understanding of women, Mr. DeVasher!"

"Well, I've seen a lot of life."

"It's so unusual in such a masculine type. Still—I suppose most of the men of achievement have been well—great lovers."

"Exactly! Look at Napoleon! Caesar! Mark Antony! Not, of course, that I'm comparing myself to them. Still I've been around a lot and I've observed women rather closely. I've always been a student of human nature."

"I could guess that. You know for all the—the sort of brute force you've got, I can sense there's a very sensitive artistic side to your nature."

"You have a remarkable feminine intuition!

"Really though, don't you write, or paint—or something?"

"Oh, I've dabbled a little with clay modeling and I've picked up a few etchings here and there. But essentially I'm a child of nature."

"One can sense that. There's something so vital about you."

"Well at heart, I'm a pagan, I suppose. I don't conform very well to the common mold."

"You know that's a good deal the way it is with me—down underneath. I like to do perfectly wild things, walk in the rain, eat at odd little restaurants, wander in slum districts looking for interesting types, buy hyacinths with my last cent—"

"Say! You and I ought to go gipsying!

"That sounds enchanting. Only—"

"Now, really wouldn't you like to walk away from all—all this? Start out some bright spring morning down a road that leads to nowhere—all your possessions behind you, adventure—life, ahead?"

"Yes, but—"

"Now, no 'buts'."

You know what's the matter with you?"

"What?"

"Well, if you don't mind my being personal—you're afraid to let yourself go."

"No!"

"Yes! You're afraid of life! You're afraid to live!"

"I believe you're right. You know you're the first man who's ever really analyzed me!

"I could tell you a lot about yourself. You see, we're really very much the same type. Say—suppose we go to some quiet place where we can really talk. I know a little restaurant with a lot of foreign atmosphere—say, have you got a dollar?"

"Not a dime! You know I was just going to ask you for a quarter."

"You were!

"Yes, it's raining and I wanted to take a taxi home."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I WOULDN'T sweep out my old junk if I could," maintained Lelia H. defensively. "Maybe we haven't always made the wisest selections, but we've lived with our old things long enough to love them, so what I want to know is what to add to make the most of what we have and must continue to use. And since I can't spend much. I'll have to keep my plans in bounds.

"Take our dining room, for instance. It's walnut and probably none too good in design, for there are a lot of curleycues that I suspect shouldn't be there. Also it's gotten hard use by our growing family, but, as I said, it's a part of us and we couldn't afford to change it if we wanted to. The rug is an Axminster predominantly blue. My dishes are white with the usual blue scenic design and I have ruby red glassware. The question is what to do about the walls and windows. We're going to re-paper and I'll make new curtains. What would you suggest?"

Answer.

Why not a blue scenic paper on a cream ground? The cream glass curtains with side draperies of red chintz? The effect there would be very fresh and pleasant and yet dominating enough to put the furniture in the shade a bit.

Still another plan would be to combine yellows with the blue in your rug. Have the walls in a very sunny yellow paper with an indistinct pattern in it. Then select a very gay large-scaled figured cretonne or chintz for draperies and make them up very nicely, full and wide and swooping. Something with a yellow ground would be nice with a pattern in quite brilliant garden colors.

Prochniks Cut Parties Till Future Is Settled

Wife of Former Austrian Minister Denies Report They Have Been Ordered to Vacate Legation Building by April 10.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Since the Nazi putsch has changed the map of Europe and Austria has become a part of Germany, Washington society has felt the effects in more than one regard. "What about the Prochniks?" is the question that has been voiced constantly since the swastika started flying in front of the former Austrian Legation.

Meanwhile, the former Minister and Mme. Prochnik have canceled all social engagements for the next two weeks and have made it plain that they "are not going anywhere during this unsettled period." Rumors were floating all over town early yesterday that they had been asked to vacate the one-time legation by April 10. Over the telephone late in the afternoon, however, Mme. Prochnik denied the report. "We haven't been given any instructions," she averred. "We are simply awaiting orders. What we'll do, or whether we'll stay in Washington, we do not yet know."

HOPE R. MILLER.

Social engagements were canceled, she said, more in deference to hostesses than because she and Mr. Prochnik meant to seek an exit from the Capital's social scene. "We haven't any rank now," she went on, "and at some parties it might be a problem for hostesses to decide where to put us."

Formally, when Mr. Prochnik was second Minister in diplomatic seniority here, he and his wife were entitled to certain seats at dinner tables. Since rank poses so many problems in Washington entertaining, the question of exactly where to put them now might stump some hostesses. But chances are, if the Prochniks do stay in Washington—and their host of friends certainly hope they will—the puzzle of whether they shall be seated "above or below the salt" will work itself out and they will be back in the partying picture as much as ever.

Many Washington residents who have lost their official rank are quite as important to the social scene as they ever were. The town is full of diplomatic expatriates who have settled here permanently and seem to like the arrangement. There also are a number of former high-ranking official hostesses who are constantly invited here, there and everywhere; are as eagerly sought after, in fact, as they were back in the days when their husbands held high Government posts.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's mailbox is flooded with invitations and although her goings and comings are kept as quiet as possible, she attends dinners, teas and musicales continually. Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, widow of the Secretary of Agriculture of the Wilson Administration, is another who entertains and is entertained frequently and has been quite an important part of the social picture this winter. Mrs. William Howard Taft finds her doorbell ringing constantly when she is in town and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, whose late husband was Attorney General, may not rate a seat "above the salt" at a dinner party but having her among the guests is a feather in the social cap of any hostess.

Party Opens New Girls' Clubroom

Sunshine and Community Society Helps Project Here.

Mrs. Charles H. Bair Presides at Presentation Ceremony.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Sunshine and Community Society, which for the past 25 years has devoted itself to charity work in Washington, has led the way for other women's organizations in aiding the new girls' club and hospice established by the Volunteers of America at 1525 Sixteenth street. Yesterday it made formal presentation of the "sunshine room," which it has furnished, and sponsored a tea there to which members of other women's societies of the city were invited.

The large room, located at the front of the house—once the home of embassies and legations—is completely furnished even to the radio and magazines. It is done in maple, with accommodations for four girls and will be used as a receiving room when the hospice is formally opened.

Ceremony Held Preceding Tea

Mrs. Charles H. Blair, president of the society, presided at the ceremony of presentation, which was held preceding the tea. Mrs. R. Claude Wright, chairman of the committee which had charge of furnishing the room, gave it in the name of the society, and Maj. Christine Eroh, director of the woman's division of the local Volunteers, and wife of Maj. H. Mills Eroh, the local commander, accepted it for her organization. The closing prayer was offered by Mrs. Charles P. Granfield, who worked with Mrs. Ella S. Knight, founder of the Sunshine and Community Society when it was first started and is still an active member.

Mrs. Wright was assisted in furnishing the room by Mrs. Marie Deal, Mrs. H. A. Matson, Mrs. H. Stuart Boyer, Mrs. T. R. Powers, Mrs. M. H. Uelsmann, Mrs. Eugene E. Thompson and Mrs. H. E. Huntsberry.

Mrs. C. M. Johnson Chairman for Tea

Mrs. C. M. Johnson, chairman of the ways and means committee of the society, was in charge of arrangements for the tea. The hospice was decorated in the colors of the Sunshine Society, yellow spring flowers and green candles. Mrs. Bair received, assisted by Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Harry Reed and Mrs. Harvey Adams.

A feature of the afternoon was a group of piano numbers by Mrs. Ethel Steele Loak, acting superintendent of the Volunteers of America, who is an accomplished pianist.

Tea tables were presided over by Mrs. James H. Underwood, Mrs. Eugene E. Thompson and Mrs. J. Edwin Reid, past presidents of the Sunshine Society; Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and chairman of the membership committee of the Hospice Legion, and Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel. Mrs. J. Noble Hoover and Mrs. W. W. Taylor were in charge of refreshments.

Mrs. Wright, in presenting the room, called attention to the motto of the Sunshine Society, a hand-painted copy of which is on the wall of the room. It reads "A Sunshine deed each day—Scatter sunshine on your way." She expressed confidence that the Sunshine room would do that for many years to come, carrying light and encouragement into the lives of destitute girls and women who will be cared for there.

Shotwell, of Columbia University, and Prof. Eugene Staley, of the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, are the heads of this committee.

There are many women's organizations among the 41 groups associated in the National Peace Conference. D. A. R. Group Scores Peyser On Picket Case

'We Have No Time for Isms,' Mrs. Holzberg Says at Luncheon.

The national defense committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday expressed "amazement at the reports in the press that Col. Julius Peyser had represented the Civil Liberties Union in defense of the pickets at the German Embassy and Austrian Legation."

Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, chairman of the committee, presided at the luncheon meeting which was held at the Mayflower Hotel and was the final session of her administration. She has been elected historian of the District D. A. R. for the coming year. "We have no time for any foreign isms, Nazism, Fascism or Communism," said Mrs. Holzberg; "Americanism is all that we can afford to support."

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith was the luncheon speaker, describing conditions in Russia as she saw them on her visit there last summer.

Place cards for the affair were made by Mrs. Warren Schantz, secretary of the committee, and represented the subjects of the year's program. Among them, the Army, Navy and Air Force; the D. A. R. "bonfire" of "Red" textbooks in the schools and topics dealing with national defense.

Guests of honor were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent-elect; Mrs. William Sherma Walker, Mrs. David D. Caldwell, Mrs. George Homer, Miss Margaret Fraser, Mrs. Joseph H. Wheat, and Miss Helen Towner.

Ethel Roosevelt. . . . a duPont still

At Washington functions where Mme. Saito, the Japanese Ambassador's wife, and one of the Chinese Ambassador's daughters are both present it is excruciating for a hostess when guests dote over Miss Wang and cold-shoulder the lady from Tokyo . . . The applause was noticeably lopsided when both were introduced at a women's banquet recently.

* * * *

From the aristocratic horse country of Virginia, which is anti-Roosevelt to the last ditch, comes a significant tale about the young Franklin Roosevelts. Junior and his exquisite duPont wife dropped in at a horse-show near Charlottesville, where he's studying law, unexpectedly (so the story goes) and barged democratically into someone's box to sit down.

"—visit from Ethel and Junior"

Later they joined a somewhat surprised party of horsey gentlefolk for a bite of al fresco lunch . . . If it were the Duke of Windsor going slumming so unassumingly it would be just too charming . . . But the tale's told with the twist that the gentry took the Roosevelts a bit coolly . . . The reason I doubt the yarn is that they'd gladly accept a Roosevelt for the sake of a duPont.

At yesterday's White House press conference President Roosevelt paid his compliments to the press twice: First when asked if he were planning some action to ameliorate the world crisis, he replied that he would scarcely launch such action at a press conference . . . A little later he observed ironically that he had read in the paper that he was sending Congress a message on the Army . . .

Outside in an anteroom sat the three TVA directors, one in one corner, one in another, the third across the room; well separated, slightly oblivious of each other, waiting to enter the oval office.

There's a well-equipped gymnasium in the House Office Building where young Congressmen can work off steam chinning themselves, running in treadmills, playing volley ball and vaulting over things. Too few of them, alas, find time to keep their bodies tuned up. The gym is usually almost empty.

* * * *

Yet the younger members are a rather fit group. You don't see many paunches among them. Quite a few were notable athletes in the twenties; Ham Fish, of New York, still lists his 1908 all-American honors in the Congressional Directory . . . Perhaps the prayer which opens each day's session should be supplemented by setting-up exercises for the sake of a sound body to house a clear mind.

"—where members let off steam"

As the champion literary consultant and revamper of speeches in Washington, Tommy Corcoran gets perhaps too much credit in current legend for President Roosevelt's prose style. On the eve of the publication of Mr. Roosevelt's state papers and commentaries Washington is inclined to think that his prose style is pretty much his own.

* * * *

For one thing, his speeches and messages have much the same swing as his extemporaneous remarks . . . It is a brittle, lumpy prose, replete with longish words and rather awkward constructions. It does not flow like Washington's, Jefferson's and Lincoln's . . . On the radio his gifted delivery often saves a sentence from mediocrity or from falling flat on its schnozzle; in print the effect is not so lively . . . And that, Mr. President, is not the newspapers' fault.

Attack on GHA Is 'Deplorable,' Roosevelt Says

President Expresses Sympathy With Aims of Health Group.

At the White House, in Congress and at headquarters of Group Health Association and the Community Chest fresh developments came yesterday in the mounting controversy over group medical practice.

With its national significance rising steadily, the battle gained in scope when:

1. W. C. Kirkpatrick, president of GHA, charged the District Medical Society with "gross discrimination" in expelling Dr. Mario Scandiffio, pointing out that at least five members are receiving with impunity salaries for giving medical service to employe groups.

2. President Roosevelt expressed sympathy with the objectives of Group Health Association, saying it was a pity for the medical society to oppose a system which is working successfully in other cities.

3. Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), California, invoked his "extension of remarks" privilege to defend health insurance principles in the Congressional Record.

4. A delegation of Civil Service Commission employes called on Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, to protest expulsion of the GHA physician and the attitude of Chest-affiliated hospitals in excluding staff doctors who wish to treat clients of the Federal Employes Association.

Roosevelt Voices Views.

The President entered the controversy for the first time when, at his semi-weekly press conference, he said the obstructionist tactics being employed to fight GHA are deplorable and indicated the unit should receive a fair chance to prove its merits.

He replied, to questioning, that in his opinion the Group Health Association does not stand for "socialized medicine," bugbear of the American Medical Association, which is assisting its local branch in battling GHA.

Requesting an explanation of "what we consider gross discrimination," Kirkpatrick informed Dr. Thomas E. Neill, president of the District Medical Society:

"We have no desire to join in persecution of any physician, notwithstanding the tactics which have been used against members of the Group Health staff, but we do desire to point out that at least some of the charges on the basis of which Dr. Scandiffio was expelled could with equal reason have been brought against other distinguished physicians, including, I am informed, an associate in your own office.

Names 5 Physicians.

"That such action has not been brought is clear evidence, it seems to me, of your intention to single out our association for attack."

Reminding Dr. Neill that Dr. Scandiffio was accused of entering into a contract with GHA without first seeking approval of the society's compensation, contract and industrial medicine committee, Kirkpatrick named five other members in good standing who, he said, did the same thing without being disciplined.

Kirkpatrick said his association has no argument with the legitimacy of the five physicians' group service activities but is concerned only with the society's inconsistency in meting out discipline.

Acting on his word as expressed to The Post Thursday, Representative Voorhis took to the Record—debate on the naval expansion program precluded a floor speech—to extol the value of group health plans as a forward step in preventive medicine.

To the protestants from the Civil Service Commission, Chest Director Willett reiterated his stand, namely, that the Community Chest is the innocent middleman in the controversy and has no immediate plans for intervention.

Coolidge Horse To Canter Here, But Will Not Run

Back to Washington yesterday—to the scene of past glories—came Calvin Coolidge's famous horse.

Though the President used to ride the horse every day, the steed never took the President anywhere, except backward and forward, up and down. Like Alice's Red Queen, no matter how fast he moves, he remains in the same place.

Altogether an unusual animal, the horse was stabled on the top floor of the White House. Now he's in Edward O. Peterson's health club in the Woodward Building.

The horse obeys every command with the greatest of ease: punching one button makes him trot; another, and he breaks into a canter, and, if the right button is pressed, he will even gallop; but it is quite certain that he does not choose to run.

"How do you know you haven't been taken for a ride?" Peterson was asked. "Are you sure this is the Coolidge horse?"

"I have the pedigree," Petersen replied. "I have a bill of sale, signed by the trustees of the Coolidge estate. When the President left the White House he took the horse along with his other personal belongings to New England, and after his death the horse was disposed of by the trustees. I bought the animal from a man in New York."

When they get old and creaky, most horses are rewarded with green pastures—but the fate of the Coolidge steed for a few more years, at least, is to ride tired businessmen, lawmakers, Cabinet members and bankers.

Commissioners Reject Plan For Separate Traffic Court

Other Prettyman Recommendations Approved, Covering Parks, Park Police, Civil Service and Freedom From Budget Bureau Control.

A separate traffic court for the District was the lone Prettyman committee proposal to suffer disapproval of the District Commissioners yesterday as a batch of other recommendations was approved.

In place of the separate court the Commissioners recommended that an additional judge should be appointed to relieve congestion in present courts.

Recommendations approved were:

That the District be placed under a civil service system similar to that of the Federal Government.

That maintenance and operation of all parks, except Rock Creek, East and West Potomac Parks, the Mall and Anacostia Park, be transferred from the National Park System to the District government.

That Park Police be made a division of the Metropolitan Police Force.

That the District be freed from supervision and control by the Budget Bureau in connection with all matters appertaining to legislation and finance.

That the office of the recorder of deeds be transferred to some department of the District, which department would have charge of all records, such as land titles, tax rolls and surveyor's lists.

That jurisdiction over all streets, sidewalks and alleys be given to the District.

In addition to the Prettyman recommendations, the Commissioners approved a proposal to permit a representative of the Health Department to be a member of the board of Freedman's Hospital, to which the District contributes one-half of the yearly appropriation. This proposal has been approved by the Health Department.

The Commissioners felt that the Prettyman recommendation for establishment of a separate traffic court would not do away with congestion in jury courts. They pointed out that many of the acts prohibited in the traffic act are of such magnitude that Congress has deemed it wise to provide jury trials.

If a separate court were established to handle traffic matters, they insisted, obviously one judge sitting in traffic court at all times would not be available to try jury cases.

"There are now nearly 500 jury cases in the offices of the District Attorney and the Corporation Counsel," the Commissioners stated, "and more requests for jury trials are being received weekly than are being disposed of."

The duty of the additional judge for the Police Court would be to alternate with the other judges, permitting of two jury courts to be in session at all times.

Regarding the recommendation by the Prettyman committee to transfer exclusive control of the Zoological Park to the Smithsonian Institution, the Commissioners stated "in fairness and equity the cost of operation of the Zoological Park should not be borne entirely by the District. We feel also that the District should bear its proportionate share, a sum not to exceed 50 per cent of the total cost of operation."

The Commissioners report on the recommendations was sent to Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, in the form of a letter.

Apprpriate legislation has already been drafted for some of the recommendations, the Commissioners said, and in other instances "legislation will be drafted as soon as time will permit."

Antelope Expert Gives Lecture for Geographic Body

Charlie Belden, who sent antelopes to the Washington Zoo by airplane, dropped in to inspect his pets yesterday, and gave an illustrated lecture on sheep and cattle ranching before the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall.

The antelopes he reported, still are doing well under the care of Zoo Director William M. Mann. He hopes to ship some antelopes to the London Zoo by airplane next summer, across the Atlantic. Before the dirigible Hindenburg burned, it carried some of his antelopes to Germany.

Thousands of sheep and cattle roam the range of Mr. Belden's 200,000-acre Pitchfork Ranch in Wyoming, and last night he showed motion pictures of what modern ranching is like.

U. S. Controls World Destiny, Nover Declares

America controls the destiny of the world today, Barnet Nover, commentator on foreign affairs for The Washington Post, told the Capital City Forum last night.

"The dictatorships never will be contented," Nover said, calling attention to the ruthless policy of Japan in China, and to the seizure of Austria by Hitler, with the blessing of Italy.

"To give the Italian or German peoples a regime of peace would damage the system of the governments under which they live," said he.

Hitler, Nover asserted, laid bare his plans before the world in his book "Mein Kampf." The German Feuhrer, he declared, not only intends to attack Czechoslovakia, but eventually to attack France. He has dreams of world domination, which can be met only by forceful resistance.

Democracies still can rally and check the fascist dictators of Germany, Italy and Japan, Nover said.

"But," said Nover, "as time passes the odds on the democracies slowly fade."

A world war is in the offing, he predicted, and it will be impossible, in the long run, for the United States to remain aloof and unentangled.

Chairman of last night's meeting was Dr. D. N. Shoemaker, president of the Friends' Society. An open forum followed the speech.

Walsh Blames Austria's Fate Upon Treaties

Georgetown Professor Says Nation Sought Anschluss at Versailles.

Austria is another victim of Versailles and St. Germain, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., said last night in the fifth of a series of lectures in Continental Hall, adding "the gloved hand of M. Clemenceau is as visible in the final debacle as the mailed fist of Hitler.'

Dr. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and regent of the School of Foreign Service, traced the rise of revolution in America, indicating the long preparation Americans had for the advent of democracy.

People of the United States, he said, should temper their "righteous indignation" over the Nazification of Austria "with the cold, chastening remembrance that Mr. Wilson agreed around a table in 1919 that the principle of self-determination for small nations should be applied to all peoples—except Austria."

Dr. Walsh said Austria's own choice immediately after the World War was anschluss with some other Germanic people, preferably Bavaria, but this was prevented by the hatred of Clemenceau and Lloyd George.

Child Welfare Aids Discussed By Social Unit

Foster Homes Advocated for Young Rather Than Institutions.

Plans to put into immediate operation improvements in child welfare were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the Council of Social Agencies in the Young Women's Christian Association, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. The suggestions considered were made in a recent survey in Washington by the Child Welfare League of America.

The Rev. John W. Rustin, chairman of the committee, presided, and reports were introduced by Mrs. Ernest Gruening, member of the Washington committee of the Child Welfare League. Mrs. D. F. Hewett, president of the Children's Protective Association, and the Rev. Laurence J. Shehan, director of Catholic Charities, were principal speakers.

Mrs. Hewett reported on a recommendation that more children who cannot remain in their homes be cared for in foster homes rather than institutions; she said that the Children's Protective Association is carrying out this project as rapidly as funds allow. She added, however, that the association wants children to be kept in their own homes whenever it can be arranged, and will continue to put its greatest emphasis upon helping parents to give their children the care they need.

Father Shehan said that the Catholic Charities were securing cooperation from doctors in giving more free medical care to children in Catholic foster homes and institutions.

The meeting expressed its appreciation to the committee which raised money to make possible the survey by the Child Welfare League. Its members are Mrs. Eugene Meyer, chairman; Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, treasurer; Mrs. James F. Curtis, secretary; Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, Mrs. Spencer Gordon, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Miss Agnes K. Hanna, Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, Mrs. Charles R. Neill, Mrs. Louisa Roberts, Mrs. Carrie G. Smith and Elwood Street.

Mrs. Field, Widow Of Realty Man, Dies

Mrs. Addie R. Field, widow of Palmer Field, died yesterday at her home, 102 East Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Born in Brattleboro, Vt., she lived in Washington 20 years. Her husband was in the real estate business here.

Vote for D. C. In Two Years Is Predicted

Forecast Is Acclaimed at Conference on Suffrage Here.

Assertions that suffrage and representation for the District will be gained in the near future—perhaps within two years—were hailed with enthusiasm by an audience of 700 delegates at the Conference on Suffrage, held last night at the United States Chamber of Commerce, under the auspices of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association.

The association's initial "mass meeting," steps were taken to form a permanent organization, with the announcement of committees, adoption of resolutions and setting of April 22 as the next meeting of the conference.

Included in the speakers were Representatives Jennings Randolph, West Virginia; Henry Teigan, Minnesota; Senator Arthur Capper, Kansas; Arthur Clarendon Smith and William McK. Clayton, chairman of the legislative committee, Federation of Citizens Associations. Wilbur S. Finch presided.

Sees Early Vote.

Taking as his text the statement, "Set Up the Ballot Box at the Capital of the United States," Clayton exhorted his audience to be vociferous in their demands on Congress. "Politically the ice is broken," he stated, "and it is indifferent to me where it is first broken—an elected school beard, elected Commissioners, elected minor judges or elected council." He predicted suffrage within two years.

"I would rather trust my life, liberty or property," he concluded, "under an elected Judas Iscariot rather than under an appointed Peter, James or John."

Representative Teigan said the local absence of suffrage "seems almost unbelievable." He said that united appeals to Capitol Hill—to the boys up on the Hill"—will bring results.

Addressing his audience as "Citizens to be of the District," Representative Jennings Randolph also advised bringing constant pressure to bear on Congress, counselling his hearers to jam committee rooms and corridors when hearings are held on bills to enfranchise the District. He said that Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, had promised consideration, at the present session, of the resolution for a constitutional amendment that would give the District representation.

"Tonight's conference on suffrage," he stated, "is one of the most significant gatherings which has ever been held in the history of the republic of the United States."

Committee of 26 Named.

Senator Capper, author of a bill that would give District residents the vote, said he favored any bill that would improve the political status of local residents, denying his bill to bring suffrage was in conflict with Randolph's that provides both suffrage and Congressional representation.

At the opening of the business session of the conference, Mrs. Donald E. Montgomery announced that 698 delegates were present, from 271 associations representing 129,707 citizeens in the District.

William A. Maio introduced a resolution that a resolution committee be appointed, consisting of Finch and 25 appointees. After the resolution was adopted, the following were appointed: J. Nelson Anderson, Burd W. Payne, Sidney R. Katz, Harry N. Stull Etta L. Taggart, Harry S. Wender, Adelbert W. Lee, William H. Mondell, Fred S. Walker, David Babp, William A. Maio, George A. Warren, Julius I. Peyser, Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, Ernest F. Henry, George W. Godgkins, Sefton Darr, Waldron Faulkner, Karl Gerber, Marvel L. Lockhart, T. J. Houston, Charles M. Thomas, C. Herbert Marshall, Woolsey W. Hall, Elzie S. Hoffman, and William A. Roberts.

Laundry Wage Parley Made Fashion Show For Lingerie in Debate Over Clothes Budget

Clarence Phelps Dodge, former head of the Community Chest, and now chairman of the conference on a minimum wage for women in the dry cleaning and laundry industries, received a lesson in lingerie yesterday.

The scene was the board room of the District Building where the conference is being held.

Employer representatives at the conference attempted to prove that women in the industry require 83 cents per week for the cost and upkeep of clothing which they wear.

First, hats were exhibited. The employers said two hats a year should suffice. The hats cost 94 cents each.

Would they wear well? Can they be cleaned without losing shape? These and other questions were hurled at the employer representatives.

"Yes," answered Sylvan King, well-known Washington merchant, who was called in to testify regarding the services and durability of the various garments.

Then the parade of sweaters, rain coats, blouses, slips, hose, nightgowns, girdles, and other fineries were introduced. The conference table resembled a rummage sale.

Employe representatives on the conference were a bit skeptical about the quality of some of the articles exhibited.

The conference was told that "at least $4.50 per week must be paid for a room which will provide a proper home," by Miss Ann Patrick, who made a survey of the rooming situation. The employers, in their proposed budget, have set aside $7.50 a week for room and board. The employes, on the other hand, have estimated a cost of $5 for a room per week and $8 for meals per week.

E. E. Farran, employer representative on the conference, cited examples of laundry employes, who, "according to their own statement are paying anywhere from $2 to $3.25 for a room per week." Farran stated that a complete report would be made at the next conference on the room situation. The employers are conducting a survey of laundry employes.

Old Stage Hit Is Made Over In Film Form

'Sally, Irene and Mary' Takes on New Life at the Capitol.

"SALLY, IRENE AND MARY." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the stage play by Eddie Dowling and Cyrus Wood, adapted to the screen by Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen, featuring Alice Faye, Tony Martin, Joan Davis and Marjorie Weaver, with Jimmy Durante, Fred Allen, Gregory Ratoff, Louise Hovick, Barnett Parker, J. Edward Bromberg, Raymond Scott Quintet, Andrew Tombes, Eddie Collins, Brian Sisters, Mary Trene and Charles Wilson. Directed by William A. Seiter. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Those sweet and amusing little girls of old-time musical comedy, "Sally, Irene and Mary," return charmingly, but so differently, in the Capitol's celluloid divertissement.

Music, plot and personalities have been completely transformed but the idea of those three adventuresome little lovelies, Sally, Irene and Mary, still furnishes the pivot for a handsomely revolving story—not a strong or original story, but a feathery and swiftly moving version of the dependable "boy meets girl" theme.

A flock of neat and worth while personal triumphs mark this pretty musical. The wiry-humored Fred Allen (referred to as "Fred Allen of the radio," and don't those people in Hollywood know that Fred was around quite prominently on Broadway for so long?) was funnier than all the crutches in anybody's hospital. Jimmy Durante, too, did something of a comeback as a "white-wings" turned theatrical promoter, which is not as fantastic as it sounds to anybody who knows show business.

Miss Faye Improves.

Alice Faye gets better and better. This time the little luscious becomes quite the youthful siren besides singing delightfully and serving up comedy gifts on the side. But some credit must be handed to her practically new husband, Tony Martin, who donates all scenes to his bride with touching devotion.

Burning up with energy, Gregory Ratoff plays a baron with a girl complex which he takes out alternately on Miss Faye, Joan Davis and Louise Hovick. Miss Davis, spidery-legged and coy, engaging in an apartment binge with ardent Baron Ratoff, is a sight to remember. As for Gyp—we mean Louise Hovick—it remains this critic's opinion that her peculiar talents have no proper scope in the movies.

The "Mary" of the show, Marjorie Weaver, plays charmingly in her relatively lesser part. Here is an ingenue who is sweet without being sugary or colorless. We should see and hear more of Marjorie.

"Sally, Irene and Mary" in the film version are little manicurists with a mighty yen for theatricals. They take jobs as cigarette and check girls just on the chance of horning into floor shows and wind up in a musical comedy that goes floppo and retrieve their fortunes in a "show boat" night club. Many Fred Allen wise cracks enliven the continuity, but we liked best the one referring to Louise Hovick's many husbands. "When that baby is through with them, they go back to the finance company."

Pretty songs occur every five minutes, but most appealing were "I Could Use a Dream" and "This Is Where I Came In," the last a really original bit of torching by the little Faye.

Scribner a Hit.

Phil Lampkin introduces M. C. Godwin who also introduces the stage show. It was all very complimentary but rather long drawn out. After all, a M. C. ought to be able to introduce himself.

Jimmy Scribner, father of the famed "Johnson Family," proved a most pleasant and diverting person. As a radio specialist, he has not the showman's personality but his sheer ability and the fascination of seeing him do a dozen highly contrasted individuals in front of the mike, placed his act in top place easily. As a snapper he offered a far-in-the-future sequence of the "Johnson Family," the wedding of Peewee and his girl friend, and also presented doggie "Sonny Boy," a canine whose smartness makes up for his lack of ancestry and whose obvious enjoyment of his work contrasted with his unfortunate brothers who appear in animal acts.

Pinkus, nut comic, is more than assisted by booful blonde Ruth Foster, smart as she is pretty. Bobby's idea of humor should delight Col. Jimmy Lake's patrons. Billy Wells and the Four Fays, often seen here before, offer their usual swift dancing act. The Royal Swedish Bellringers offer harmony in chime time and also extract music from glasses.

The Capitol Orchestra attempts to please all tastes with a hodge-podge overture, including snatches from all the tunes and classics you've ever heard.

Technicolor Musical Sets New Standards of Beauty.

"THE GOLDWYN FOLLIES." Samuel Goldwyn Technicolor picturization of a story and screen play by Ben Hecht, for United Artists release, featuring Adolphe Menjou, the Ritz Brothers, Zorina, Andrea Leeds, Kenny Baker, Helen Jepson, of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company; Phil Baker, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Ella Logan, Bobby Clark, Jerome Cowan, Nydia Westman, Charles Kullman, Frank Shields, the American Ballet of the Metropolitan Opera and the "Goldwyn Girls." Music by the late George Gershwin. Directed by George Marshall. At the Palace Theater.

By the sheer artistry of this production, Samuel Goldwyn rather conclusively takes his place as the Ziegfeld of the musical cinema.

BELL.

"The Goldwyn Follies" reveals a determination on the part of the producer to subordinate ribaldry to superior artistic accomplishment and the usual claptrap of the "movies" to a quality of beauty that must appeal to every spectator with any sense whatever of effects that are as colorful as they are in good taste. The entire production is executed in one of Technicolor's superlative demonstrations of the manner in which natural color photography can be made a real asset of the screen.

This opulent subject departs from the Ziegfeldian revue formula in its relation of a tenuous, but still well enough defined, story of a mighty motion picture producer's endeavor to imbue his production with the "human touch," rather than the grotesqueries conceived by the usual, or garden, variety of Hollywood "genius." To attain this end, Oliver Merlin picks up a "small town" girl whose comments on one of his location scenes he has overheard. She thinks the scene was absurd and the demigod of the studios and lots largely agrees with her. She becomes his "Miss Humanity," to lend his future pictures the common touch that will appeal to the discriminating tastes of a world audience.

Is a Subtle Satire.

Upon this premise, the developments of a fragile, but agreeable, "plot" are worked out. In fashioning his script along these unique lines, Ben Hecht, the testy author of the work, has paid Hollywood a tribute of rich satire—subtle, not too blatant, but still rich in its imputations as to the specious motives that prompt too many picture-makers to permit their releases to depart widely from any known standard of normalcy or clear thinking. In every scene, Merlin attempts first to violate all of the dictates of sound judgment—and then revises each to conform to the sounder dictates of the girl who sees life more or less as it is.

Mr. Hecht, in short, "puts Hollywood in its place," and in so doing provides the framework for a series of episodes that engage the services of as notable a cast of "specialists" as has found its way to the silver sheet in many a day. The making of pictures, of course, allows a wide range for the introduction of individual contributions to the "action" that roam the whole field of theatrical and cinematic effort.

The foremost artiste in the cast is Helen Jepson, soprano star of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, who photographs stunningly and sings magnificently. Her two successive scenes from "La Traviata" compile, perhaps, a little too much grand opera for motion picture audiences to accept placidly in one dose, so to speak, but there can be no gainsaying the distinguished charm of her performance. In her contrast to the exalted artistry of Jepson is the low comedy of the Ritz Brothers, which at times palls just a bit but, in the main, marks the best work they have done for the cameras.

Then there are Adolphe Menjou, Kenny Baker and Andrea Leeds to carry the romantic trends of the story. They do their work flawlessly, Menjou here having much the same sort of role as the one he played so effectively in "A Star Is Born." Miss Leads further augments the fine impression she made in "Stage Door" and Kenny Baker, as a tenor hamburger cook presiding over a lunch wagon, is afforded one of his best opportunities.

Zorina a Surprise.

The surprise of the picture, however, is Vera Zorina, who prefers to be known professionally by the single name of Zorina. Zorina is not only one of the most accomplished dancers the films have discovered, but also is an actress of parts who impersonates a sulky picture star with a smoldering warmth of temperament that sets her a little apart from any of the other film players who have essayed similar roles. Her dancing is in the best ballet manner and revelatory of a distinctive style that again cannot be matched by any other artiste now before the cameras.

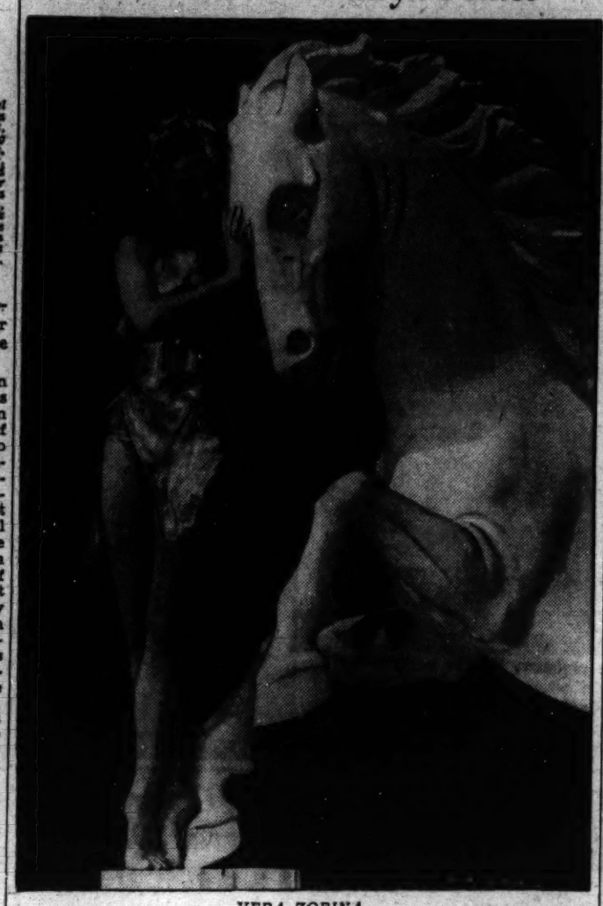
Edgar Bergen and that fabulous young blockhead, Charlie McCarthy, as goes without saying, are sure-fire. Their scene with Phil Baker, who becomes an actor as well as a jesting accordionist in this assignment, is one of the highlights of the picture. Bergen and his carpentered stooge appear in some four or five spots through the film and are a riot on each occasion.

Bobby Clark, Ella Logan, Charles Kullman—in the "Traviata" sequences with Helen Jepson—Jerome Cowan, as a movie director, and numerous others add to the luster of this superlative production.

Seldom have scenes of such transcendent beauty as the water ballet and Venetian grand canal sequences been caught by any camera. The Balachine American Ballet from the Metropolitan Opera and the "Goldwyn Girls" add spirited and entrancingly lovely backgrounds for many of the picture's richly beautiful ensembles.

The new bill at the Palace includes the customary auxiliary features, but in the light of the major feature's brilliance they will be immediately forgotten.

Scores Hit in 'Goldwyn Follies'



VERA ZORINA,

a Washington visitor during the President's birthday celebration, who proves herself an actress and dancer of the first rank in the Technicolor production of "The Goldwyn Follies," now on view at Loew's Palace Theater. From her work in her first American film, this talented young artiste seems definitely pointed toward stardom. She is surrounded by an all-star cast.

'Thrill of a Lifetime' Tuneful Hodgepodge of Mild Merit.

"THRILL OF A LIFETIME." Paramount picturization of a story by Seena Owen and Grant Garrett, adapted to the screen by the authors and Paul Gerard Smith, featuring the Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Betty Grable, Leif Erikson, Larry Crabbe, Zeke and Anne Canova, Franklin Pangborn and Dorothy Lamour. Produced by Fanchon and directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

In fabricating this inconsequential item of musical fol-de-rol for Paramount release, Fanchon, the feminine half of the producing firm of Fanchon and Marco, adhered rigidly to the method that prevailed in the creation of the stage revues that used to tour the country under the firm name of her and her brother.

An attenuated and unconvincing story has been made the slended thread upon which to drape an almost unbelievable number of song, dance and comedy specialties that enlist the eager activities of a large number of competent performers who neened only a little more substantial vehicle to make their work notable.

It all has something to do with a theatrical producer and an embryo author who conducts "Camp Romance" as a major occupation and writes unstable plays as a sideline. The theater and the romanticists become peculiarly involved in a series of complications that don't quite make sense but do make a pretty swell vaudeville show.

The greater part of the action takes place at the camp on the lake—or was it a river?—where love is guaranteed every customer. It doesn't work out quite that way. The matter, to be entirely truthful about it, is not worth going into. Some of the individual contributions of the gayety of the film, however, will do with a little going over. There are some clever people here.

Yacht Club Boys Click.

For instance, there are the Yacht Club Boys—Adley, Kelly, Mann and Kern—who have two topical numbers of their own devising that are worth listening to for the humor of their lyrics, if nothing else. Then there is Dorothy Lamour, who sings a single song—the title number of the picture—in acceptable fashion. And for the dancing there are Ben Blue, who also plays the most effective comedy role in the piece; Eleanore Whitney, that fast-stepping youngster, who hasn't been seen too much of late. Betty Crable and Judy Canova, who also sings and does a comedy impersonation that is utterly grotesque, as always. Zeke and Anne Canova also edge into the proceedings in a number or two of their rare hillbilly songs. Johnny Downs has an unsympathetic part as a young vaudevillian, which is not as amusing as it should be. Leif Erikson is easily the best actor in the cast, unless one wishes to make an exception of Franklin Pangborn. But even Mr. Pangborn isn't quite as funny as usual.

Some of the musical numbers will catch the ear of any audience. The Fanchonettes add their graceful dancing to many of these vocal ensembles and rather pull their scenes out of the fire. Larry "Buster" Crabbe should stick to his swimming.

Considerably more enlivenment is to be derived from the Earle stage bill this week, presided over by Tommy Dorsey as trombonist-conductor of his famous "swing" orchestra. The Dorsey program at yesterday afternoon's second performance was accompanied by a continuous ovation of hand-clapping, whistling and shouts on the part of the adolescent "swing" enthusiasts who crowded the theater.

Accompanied by Bedlam.

This enthusiasm was carried so far that the house staff found itself completely unable to control the howling mob. Mr. Dorsey seemed to enjoy it. There were those in the audience, however, who would have been just as well pleased if off-beat hand-clapping had not accompanied every "swing" number and the shouting could have been at least partially curbed.

The musical program offered by this popular organization ran largely to the blatancy of modern syncopations, with an occasional "swing" arrangement of such musical classics as "Liebestraum" and "The Song of India."

Among the specialists with the orchestra are Ann Anderson, tap dancer; Jack Leonard, barytone; Allen Starr, tenor; Edythe Wright, songstress, and Jay and Lou Seiler, two nimble dancers who had the most fun on their elliptical skils, which they maneuver in uncanny fashion.

The Paramount News is the principal subsidiary of a bill that is wholly on the frivolous side. The program's chief appeal will be found in Tommy Dorsey's hour on the stage—if you can hear it over the din of the over-exuberant young hoodlums who seem to think they are part of the show.

Columbia

"LOVE IS A HEADACHE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story idea by Louise Heifets and Herbert Klein, starring Gladys George and Franchot Tone, supported by Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler, Ralph Morgan, Ted Healy, Frank Jenks and Jesse Ralph. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Fortunately this little program picture doesn't take itself seriously and so, for all its faults, it has its amusement value.

Weak in plot and motivation, it abounds in "situations" loosely strung together. The majority are pretty funny, others, forgive us, merely phoney.

Peter Lawrence is an easy-going, lackadaisical, tropically gaited columnist who came up from Tenth avenue to a very ultra newspaper office. Carlotta Lee, actress with many flops to her credit, hails from the same avenue; in fact, she and Peter stole rides on the same ice wagon step. Peter takes pleasure baiting her in his column—we're not sure why, though maybe the authors meant to imply it was because she had chosen success rather than Peter as her goal—anyhow they fight!

After a series of situations and verbal battles, Carlotta is tricked into posing as an adopted mother of a pair of very tough, "dese" and "dose" youngsters. In a surprisingly short time, she comes to love the kiddies, terribly, sincerely, righteously—only Peter doesn't believe her, and off they go to the wars again.

Check your critical faculties at the door, forget about consistency, and you'll probably laugh at a good deal of the footage. Gladys George and Franchot Tone have a pleasant romp with Carlotta and Peter, manfully keeping some pretty soggy dialogue with its head above water and making anything half-way good seem better. They work under wraps throughout.

Frank Jenks and the late Ted Healy, as two master minds, help a great deal and so do Mickey Rooney and Virginia Weidler, who make two stock and pretty unbelievable kids almost come true. Their ice-cream soda heartbreak scene is swell! Good actors, these kids. Ralph Morgan and Jess Ralph are wasted.

The main trouble is that the picture isn't going anywhere and so doesn't arrive. Its big asset, an apparent realization of the above fact and complete relaxation.

A too-short Fitzpatrick Travelogue takes us to Peru for beautiful glimpses of a fascinating and picturesque country.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 18.—Bill Powell wants his friends to know that, like Mark Twain's story—the accounts of his decline are very much exaggerated. True, he had an operation, but now it's turned into a vacation, which he didn't expect to take lying down.

HEDDA HOPPER.

He hoped to be down in South America dancing with the senoritas. He'll be ready for a picture, providing they can find a suitable story, within a month. And I got this from the bedside.

Bill says he won't wait another seven years to take a vacation. From now on he will take two a year. Bill has already arranged to spend a month in the Italian villa Garbo is occupying at the moment. I asked him what that villa has that Hollywood hasn't, and all I got was a Mona Lisa smile.

The suave sophistication which emanates from him isn't as easy as people imagine. He worked hard for that polish. He's just a normal kind of a guy with a divine sense of humor. You'd be in hysterics if you ever listened to him dictate a letter. He'll be going along all right, until he hits a natural sentence, and then he says: "No—no—no—strike that out; that doesn't sound like the Thin Man."

I got a giggle from the story that Natalie M. Kalmus, Technicolor expert, is going into the African desert with new make-up and costumes, hoping to persuade the natives to discard their dirty picturesque burnoose for some brand-new ones, whipped up in Bond street, London.

If they want to make the tribesmen look like English extras, why not do the picture on Korda's back lot? I'll expect to see "Lawrence of Arabia" dressed like a member of Parliament—in striped trousers, morning coat and topper.

Not all our visitors come to Hollywood to get into the movies. Frank Case, of the Algonquin Hotel fame, who knows every celebrity from the theater to motion pictures, came here first with Doug Fairbanks 22 years ago. Frank is now at his cottage at Malibu writing his memoirs. He's already been given $1,000 advance on it. I've put in my bid for the first copy.

Frank was a consistent contributor to O. O. McIntyre. He got his writing ability from his children. Margaret Case Harriman wrote that delicious profile of Elizabeth Arden for the New Yorker, which deprived said mag of Arden's beauty ad for a short space of time. Margaret also did Maury Paul (Cholly Knickerbocker). And did she do him! He loved it.

Frank's son, Carroll, is in George G. Nathan's spot on Judge. Parent follows in children's footsteps.

The Clover Club is going to get mighty angry if these private parties continue. I hear that Connie Bennett's party lasted 48 hours. And the money that changed hands would appall you. Lewis Milestone, who loves a game of poker, took one look at the stakes, got in his car, and is still going!

Understand it's not Katharine Hepburn, but Director George Gukor who's gone temperamental on the "Holiday" set. George insists his sets be just soooo. He might have gotten Pierre Dutel to give the sets the once over, but Pierre is on his way to Texas decorating a house for an oil millionaire.

"It's time I treated," said Jack Morgan, as he greeted over 100 celebrities to cocktails and supper at his new Bel Air house warming. Jack not only writes original stories for the movies, but owns and operates the Cock and Bull, and fathers two of the most beautiful children I've ever seen.

The kiss that Pat di Cicco planted on Florence Rice's face, during a rhumba at the Troc, was so unexpected she turned all colors of the rainbow.

Bernadine Fritz, wife of the banker who lives in China, gave a party for the Temple dancer, Ran Gopal. Janet Gaynor, Gladys Robinson, Mrs. Max Reinhardt, and Ann Goodman, of Bergdolf Goodman, were in heaven when Bernadine spilled all her Oriental jewels from a huge casket onto the table.

Metropolitan

"WIDE OPEN FACES." Columbia Pictures filmization of a screen play by Earle Snell, Clarence Marks and Joe Bigelow, starring Joe E. Brown, with Jane Wyman, Alison Skipworth, the late Lyda Roberti, Alan Baxter, Lucien Littlefield, Sidney Toler, Berton Churchill, Barbara Pepper and Joseph Downing. Directed by Kurt Neumann. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

Joe E. Brown—who has a gentle way of presenting his roughhouse, a guileless manner of pulling his sleight-of-hand tricks, and an amusing habit of opening his comedy-mask face—in "The Wide Open Faces," lives in a small town called Willow Springs.

As Wilbur, Maitre d'Squirt of the town's sole drug store, Wilbur has a front seat at the capture of a famous bank robber, gains fame and front-page spreads through his participation in the capture. Love enters his life when he enters an old mansion where the gangster was believed to have hidden his last haul, for its owner is a lovely young girl who first shoots at him, then comes to revere his great bravery, etc.

From near and far come gangsters who believe Wilbur knows more than he tells the cops. They bring temporary prosperity to the old manse, which become a hotel—whiff! like that, because the movies are like that. Wilbur eventually finds the money, eludes a motly crew of gunsmen and their molls, wins his gal, leaves his fans lighthearted, their mentalities untaxed, but their funny-bones greatly titillated.

Using incredible situations and improbable gags, with Joe's wide-open, honest face to put over the absurdities; with Allison Skipworth to heave in some delicate hunks of sarcasm, and freshly appealing Jane Wyman, as feminine foil for Brown, there is little more to be desired, in the way of light entertainment.

It pretends to be nothing but what it is: a simple, slightly wacky comedy, with enough suspense, humor, over-stressing of character, and over-playing of mood to make it good fare for the average movie-goer.

Winifred Shaw froths forth in a miniature called "Little Me." Miss Shaw is nice to look upon, has a pleasing voice, knows a few acting tricks and has stupidly hodge-podge material to work with.

Floyd Gibbons presents "The Bolted Door," which shows what happened when a young mother let the bathroom door slam when baby was in the tub. More gripping than it sounds.

Porky the Pig, hero of the animated cartoon, goes Western in a whiff about the Pony Express. One of the best of its kind in recent showings.

The newsreel completes the bill.

Nats' Camp Jubilant Over Kuhel-for-Bonura Deal

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1938 15

This Morning

Kuhel's Work in Sox Park Made Deal.

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 18.

The trade that sent First Baseman Joe Kuhel to the Chicago White Sox, like many another baseball deal, was the outgrowth of a coincidence. Because Kuhel happened to go on a batting spree in the Chicago Park last summer, Manager Jimmy Dykes developed an extreme liking for the Washington first baseman, and today's trade is the result.

POVICH.

Kuhel was a feeble hitter in every other park in the league last year, but at the White Sox grounds he was no less than a batting fiend. On one afternoon last summer he equaled the American League record for three-baggers with three blows of that type, and throughout the season he was batting the ball against the fences when the Nats visited Chicago.

At other points in the league Kuhel struck no terror in neither enemy pitchers nor managers, but Dykes could be guided only by what he saw. And he saw in the Nats' first baseman a left-handed hitter who murdered White Sox pitching. It often happens thus. A manager cannot help but be impressed with a chap who beats his ball team and develop a possessiveness toward him. It's hard to forget the talents of such a guy.

It was because Joe Cronin remembered Heine Manush as a great ball player with Washington teams that he arranged a deal that would bring Manush to the Red Sox. It was common knowledge that Manush was no longer a batting threat in the American League, but Cronin found it difficult to believe that. One year's experience with Manush at Boston proved to Cronin that he had overestimated Manush, had permitted his memories of the fellow's play in his heyday to influence his better judgment.

ZEKE BONURA.

Griff Liked Al.

Jack Russell was a rank failure with Washington in 1936—unable to win against the weakest opposition—but Cronin remembered him as a great relief pitcher in 1933 when his appearance in the late innings was tantamount to the seal of victory for Washington. He gave up Joe Cascarella and $10,000 for Russell and received only a done-in pitcher.

It was not mere chance, either, that Clark Griffith bought Al Simmons from the Detroit Tigers last Spring when the opportunity presented itself. Despite the fact that Simmons had failed to hit .300 the year before and that the Tigers were willing to let him go for the waiver price, Griffith eagerly grabbed him up.

Because Griffith could not completely obliterate from his memory Simmons' feats of former years. He could hardly conceive that Simmons had slumped to the point where he was not worth the $7,500 waiver price. Why, Simmons had single-handedly, almost, beaten the Washington club out of the 1930 pennant in a double-header at Philadelphia when he hit a last-inning home run in each game. And throughout his career he had slaughtered Washington pitching.

Even the Old Fox, 50 years in baseball, permitted himself to be guided by the always risky method of playing the hunch that the figures were lying.

Scared of Deal.

The Kuhel-Bonura deal would have been swung last December had Jimmy Dykes not taken alarm at the reaction against Mickey Cochrane in Detroit after the Tigers traded away the popular Gerald Walker.

The exchange of the two first basemen had already been arranged by telephone before Griffith and Dykes met at the winter meeting at Milwaukee, but the White Sox manager admitted that he didn't have the courage to go through with it.

"I think the deal would help both clubs," Dykes told Griffith, "but frankly I'm scared to make it. Look what is happening to Mickey Cochrane in Detroit. They want to burn him in oil for trading off Gerald Walker. Bonura is just as popular in Chicago as Walker was in Detroit. The fans would climb all over me if I let Bonura go. Let's let it cool off a bit."

Dykes was still afraid to make the deal when the White Sox went into spring training, but finally found an excuse when Bonura persisted in his holdout tactics. The Chicago press took the side of the ball club in the salary battle, and Bonura was pictured as a fellow who was holding out for an outrageous sum and jeopardizing the White Sox's chances to win the pennant. This year the Sox are supposed to make their grand bid for the flag. Thus fortified by a more favorable public opinion, Dykes, struck while Bonura was losing his hold on the Chicago public. He was able to make it appear that he was trading off an ungrateful and disgruntled ball player who, in that frame of mind, would be no particular asset to the White Sox. It has all been very cute on Dykes' part.

'Whizzer' White, Colorado Gentleman Who Goes Places With a Football, Visits Our City

By Walter Haight.

I was sitting there seeing into how many different designs I could fold my last dollar and trying to decide whether I should bet it on a horse, play a number or go to the Gayety when the boss suddenly pipes, "Haight!"

I jumped up, clicked my heels together, saluted and said in the quiet manner he demands, "Yes, sir. And what may I do for you?"

"Haight, you look like the hungriest man in the office. Suppose you go to that luncheon at the Capitol and interview 'Whizzer' White," he said, as eight pictures of Hitler shaking hands with Mussolini, dove off the Sunday editors desk across the room and sneaked into the bottom of a waste basket.

As I was arranging my scrawny bones in my famous triple-repeater topcoat, the boss moved over to me and whispered, "And remember, you mug, if there's cigars, don't be holding out on me like you did after that Georgetown banquet, see!"

If there's any place I don't mind eating "at" when I need a haircut, it's the Senate Restaurant. Oh boy—oh joy—plenty of eats. Just think, trips to California, free meals, and we get paid for it. Oh sportswriting where is thy sting? Breakfast at 11 a. m., luncheon, not lunch, mind you, at 1 p. m.

It took a lot of planning and a series of coincidences to get me that meal. There had to be a State of Colorado, there had to be a Colorado University, there had to be a boy named White. He had to be an All-American football player, there had to be Senators from Colorado, there had to be sights to see in Washington, there had to be — but let somebody else worry about that—I "et."

However, I could have done without that head waiter's crack. I appeared in the doorway alone and he walks up, looks me over, and asks, "Table for two?" I guess there is some excuse for him, at that. I'm beginning to look like "three men on a steak."

I had the whole "Whizzer" White thing explained to me. White, it seems, is a young man who excels at going places quickly with footballs. In fact, he's so good at it that Pittsburgh Pirates have offered to trade him 15,000 of those green things with "ones" all over them for a season of professional football. Now White is a sort of collegiate freak in that he has brains in addition to football ability, and it is the further development of the matter that fits under his curly hair that is causing him to debate the wisdom of taking the professional offer.

He has won a Rhodes scholarship. I thought until today that a Rhodes scholar was a WPA man learning how to build highways, but it really means finishing one's education at Oxford. And so he ponders—$15,000 on one side and higher education on the other. And to think, when I was a kid I'd play "hookey" any time for an all-day sucker!

Brother White, tall, and built along the lines of our Cliff Battles, blushed at the mention of New York debutantes. He joined the hosts, Senators Alva B. Adams and Edwin C. Johnson, of his home State, in making a short speech.

Perhaps the most significant remark he made was "I like Washington very much and I mean to return and spend some time here." There was determination in his eyes which seemed to spell "campaign, politics, House, Senate and possibly Supreme Court." Inasmuch as he will study law if he takes the pro offer, I may have read his mind.

"I'm not rich, you know," said the boy who waited on table at his university to help pay his way. "I can't make up my mind on that Pittsburgh offer. Everyone I meet wants to make up my mind for me. They are very kind, but right now I'm interested only in getting a job that will carry me through next summer. Some of the writers here in the East have me wrong. I'm not a good baseball player, although I will play for Colorado this spring. I would like to play in the All-Star game next fall and probably will if I intend to play pro football. However, if I go to England, of course, that's out."

White and the other members of the Colorado U. basketball team spent a busy day sight-seeing and the best crack they heard was the one in reference to George Washington's having thrown a dollar across the river. You know about "the dollar went farther in those days."

All of which is irrelevant (pardon me). Most important is the fact that Haight "et."

Hard-Hitting Zeke to Add Punch at Bat

Harris Welcomes Deal Giving Team Another Right-hander.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 18.—The Washington baseball bosses were exulting today after completing the deal that brought big, loud, hard-swinging Henry Joseph (Zeke) Bonura to the Nats in exchange for First Baseman Joe Kuhel.

Owner Clark Griffith pronounced it the best player-trade he has ever negotiated and Manager Bucky Harris all but emitted a mild "Whoopee!" when the deal was clinched.

"Now let 'em bring on that left-handed pitcher," grinned Harris. "That Bonura is plain murder up there at the plate. Every since he came into the league, I've always wished he were on our side."

The trade was not arranged until 3 o'clock this morning when Clark Griffith finally hung up in a long-distance telephone conversation with Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, at Pasadena.

Dykes Reopened Deal.

The deal, which had been simmering since last fall, cooled off and was at a standstill until Dykes queried Griffith by telegraph yesterday, asking the Nats' owner if he were still interested.

"I told Dykes, if he'd give me permission to talk to Bonura, at New Orleans, and I could arrange a satisfactory salary for Bonura, I'd talk trade with him," said Griffith. "Bonura said he would like to play for Bucky Harris and we came to terms on a contract. Then I told Dykes the deal was on."

It was Bonura's hold-out tactics that finally prompted the White Sox to make the deal, although Dykes always had a fondness for Kuhel. The White Sox management was considerably irked by Bonura's demands for a $15,000 salary after his absence from more than 30 games last fall, and stiffened considerably toward the big Italian.

Asked if he met Bonura's demands for $15,000, Griffith said, "Not quite," indicating that the first baseman had been willing to compromise.

Bonura, in a telephone conversation with Griffith today, declared that the trade was to his liking. "There's no sense in kidding, I'd rather play with Harris than Dykes," he said. "We had our differences last season and it would be better if I were on another club."

Kuhel Calm at News.

So vexed at Bonura were the White Sox that they refused to permit him to go to their Pasadena camp to talk contract and then invoked the aid of Judge Landis' office to prevent Bonura from working out with the Cleveland Indians at his native New Orleans. Under the league rules, a holdout is not permitted to condition himself in another team's camp.

"He's probably not in the best of condition right now," said Harris, "but he shouldn't have much trouble catching up with the rest. He's the kind of a fellow who always takes care of himself. He has a few private matters to clear up in New Orleans and told me he'd report here or leave there on Sunday."

Except for the surprise with which he learned that the deal had been made, Kuhel was unmoved as he was told that he was parting company with the Washington club after 10 years in a Nats' uniform.

"That's baseball, I guess," said Kuhel. "Anyway I haven't been disgraced by the deal. Anybody who figures in an even swap with Bonura must be rated pretty good. The chances are, I'm going to a better ball club. That Chicago park won't do my batting average any harm, either."

Hitting Is Needed.

Bonura will slip into the Washington line-up without even a struggle. The lifetime batting average of .318 that he brings to the Nats is exceedingly welcome. And the fact that he is a right-handed hitter in the midst of a line-up that was preponderantly left handed makes his presence doubly important.

Young Jimmy Wasdell, who was prepared to give Joe Kuhel a battle for the first base job, will be relegated once again to the background. Wasdell held a chance to oust Kuhel, but the Nats' bosses admit that the young first baseman has little chance to beat out Bonura. In acquiring Bonura, they sacrificed defensive skill for the all important slugging that always characterized the play of the thick-legged Italian. Bonura last season rapped the ball at a .345 rate for the White Sox while Kuhel was batting only .283 for the Nats.

"I'm willing to let a few base hits get past Bonura if he'll give us the kind of hitting he gave the White Sox," declared Harris. "The chief thing I want to see is that big guy up there with a bat in his hand and a Washington uniform on his back. That means ball games.

Hits Well Above .300.

"At that, Bonura isn't too bad out out there in the field. He has been coming along. Don't forget the percentages in 1936 showed that he was the best fielding first baseman in the league. The figures may have been lying a bit, but you can't take it away from him. He reminds me of Hank Greenberg. They were both bum fielders when they broke in. Greenberg has come along fast and so has Bonura."

It's Bonura's long-distance hitting proclivities that intrigue the Washington bosses. Doubles, triples and home runs have rattled off his bat for the four seasons he has been in the big leagues and he has always rated high among the run producers. Getting his hits with men on bases has been one of the big Italian's specialties.

Kuhel in his seven years with the Nats has driven in 839 runs and in striking contrast is Bonura's total of 440 runs driven in in only four years at Chicago. The only year in which Bonura failed to hit .300 in the majors was 1934, when he batted .295. He broke in by hit-

Women's Backstroke Record Falls in A. A. U. Swim Meet

Betty Strohecker Negotiates 100-Yard Distance in 1:19.4 in Shoreham Pool Events.

The District A. A. U. Women's 100-yard backstroke record suffered a compound fracture last night at the Shoreham pool where pretty Betty Strohecker hung up a new mark of 1 minute. 19.4 seconds for the distance, after the old standard already had been lowered.

Her performance featured an evening of thrill-packed swimming in the qualifying heats of the annual A. A. U. tournament, and followed immediately on the splashing heels of June Booth, who bettered the existing standard of 1 minute 21 seconds. Miss Booth held the record, made last year, and seemed to have a firmer grip on it when she negotiated the distance in 1 minute, 20.1 seconds.

These efforts share the spotlight with those of Ann Bono, who qualified for the 50-yard free style finals tonight; retained her 100-yard free style crown, and lost her 220-yard title to a teammate, Helen Flett. The petit miss was not at her best in the latter race, and did not appear overly anxious to exert herself. But that in no wise detracts from Miss Flett's victory, for she swam a smooth, well-paced race.

Central High School accumulated 18 points toward the 56 necessary to win the team championship, aided by a stroke of good fortune ini the medley relay. It was a stroke of ill-fortune for the Y. M. C. A. natators, whose quintet held a 6-yard lead at the end of the first lap, only to be disqualified when Hubert Will left his mark a split second before the lead-off man touched home.

Miss Bono experienced difficulty in the century, winning over stout-hearted Florence Farwell, a teammate, by a fingernail. The difference between them was so slight the timers had trouble separating them. The victor was at her best for the test, and was fortunate in being so, for Miss Farwell gave her her a thrilling battle, succumbing only after a furious stretch drive.

Another record-smashing battle in the backstroke looms tonight, when finals will be held at the

Favored Teams Win Games In Post-A. A. U. Cage Event

Upsets Absent as Tourney Continues on Two Fronts; Merrick, Senate Beer Win.

By Jack Munhall.

Upsets were scarce again last night as opening round games in the eleventh annual Post-A. A. U. championships continued on two fronts.

Only once did a form reversal impend on the six-game program while favorites galloped along easily.

And it was Mount Vernon S. S., the city's oldest, organized sandlot team, that threatened to befuddle the experts for the first time.

Playing the feature unlimited encounter at Tech gym, Tom Peck's bad boys carried the fight to Merrick Boys Club for 35 minutes before bowing, 33-32, in a loosely-played, but exciting game. Merrick, expected to annex the decision without undue trouble, was forced to overcome a 26-19 lead midway of the second half to gain the victory.

Prior to that affair, Senate Beer, which forfeited its 145-pound championship to enter the heavier ranks, outlasted a stubborn Treasury Accounts & Deposits team, 37-23, in the other unlimited encounter.

In the same gym earlier in the evening, two strong contenders for the 145-pound title waltzed through their initial tests and joined Boys Club of Washington Fleetwings as favorities in their unpredictable race. In the first game on the program, Regal Neon Flashes, boasting a mixture of high school stars, trounced Police Boys Club No. 5, 43-24. Then Rosevelt Community Center Boys Club stepped on the floor to hang a 40-29 shiner on Alex Browdy.

In the 130-pound clashes at Boys' Club of Washington, Roosevelt C. C. Boys' Club nipped Merrick Boys' Club, 27-22, and the highly touted Stewart Bros. Photographers whipped Presidents, 30-17.

Senate met unexpected difficulty with Treasury, due in part to its own inefficiency in the first half but particularly because Uncle Sam's children played an alert, aggressive game. The Beermen can thank Mr. Gerry Burns, the former Western High School star, for the Pilot of Indians Raps Hitting of Rookies.

New Orleans, March 18 (AP).—Irked by yesterday's 4-to-2 defeat by the New Orleans Pelicans, Manager Oscar Vitt, of the Cleveland Indians said today he is through taking up time with rookies.

"Those Lambies (rookies)) of mine," Vitt said, "certainly didn't do any hitting when I put them in the game, in spite of the fact they had just as much practice before the game as the regulars had.

"I'm through taking up time with those kids. Most of them will be good players in a year or two but we've got to get ready for this season. From now on the rookies will have to do their hitting after the regulars are finished."

CUB HOMERS WIN.

Los Angeles, March 18 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs collected only five hits in their first exhibition game today, but three of them were homers, the result being a 5-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Two of the round-trippers were by Ken O'Dea, young Cub catcher, with the other coming off the bat of Billy Herman, veteran second-sacker. The Sox made nine safeties, but couldn't effectively put them together against the good hurling of Clay Bryant, who worked five innings on the Cub hill, and Bob Logan, who finished.

PIRATES ARE WOBBLY.

San Bernardino, Calif., March 18 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates showed they were far behind in their training today when they made seven errors while taking a 10-6 trouncing at the hands of the Los Angeles Angels in the first of their 30 exhibition games.

Al Todd slammed out two home-runs, and Paul Waner got two triples while the Pirates were outbatting the Angels 12 hits to 10.

Los Angeles counted four runs in the fourth inning, when Jim Tobin relieved Russ Bauers on the mound for Pittsburgh. Tobin passed five batters in three innings, while Blanton showed best, giving but two hits and one run in his three cantos.

Hoya Squad Drills Today

Baseball Candidates to Hold Outside Practice.

The first outdoor baseball drill is on the schedule for the Georgetown University nine at the Medical Field this afternoon. For a week Coach Joe Judge has been trying to take his boys outside but inclement weather forced his squad to stay in the Ryan gymnasium.

Judge expects a tough grind to get the boys in shape for the Vermont University game, which is 15 days away. Today Judge expects to give his boys a light workout with exercises and batting practice.

During the past week the batterymen have been getting into form in the gymnasium. Michael Petroskey, who last year won ten of the Hoyas' 12 victories, is slowly getting into shape. Others who have impressed Judge are Hank Bertrand, DeSales Powell, Johnny Smith and Tom Keegin.

About 22 infielders and outfielders will be out for the seven positions. Only one was left vacant through graduation and that is at second base. Jim Bodine was the regular second baseman in 1937. His position will be filled either by Joe Mellendeck, who made quite a name for himself on the gridiron last fall, or Jim Leber, a sophomore. The regulars coming back are Capt. Johnny Cavadine at third; Tommy Keating at short, and Harry Bassin at first. In the outfield the veterans Tommy Nolan, Carl (Smitty) Nau and Tony Barabas are back and will in all probability be in the starting lineup when the Hoyas open against Vermont April 4.

Louis to Box Max June 22

Promoter Jacobs Fails to Select City.

By Eddie Brietz,

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, March 18.—If Joe Louis beats Harry Thomas in the Chicago Stadium April 1, he'll meet Max Schmeling for the world's heavyweight title either in Chicago, New York or Detroit on June 22.

Mike Jacobs head of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, made this announcement today after a conference with Joe Jacobs, American representative for Schmeling. Mike Jacobs said:

"We've agreed on the date, but the site still is indefinite. I have until 40 days before the fight to decide where it will be held. Detroit and Chicago seems to want it just as badly as New York. What Chicago does for Louis and Thomas on April 1 will be one of the determing factors."

Joe Jacobs said he had been in communication with Schmeling and that the June 22 date is agreeable. Julian Black, one of Louis' managers, agreed via long-distance telephone from Chicago.

"I want Schmeling here 40 days in advance," said Jacobs, "and if he doesn't show up I'll put Maxie Baer in against Louis. He looked pretty good beating Tommy Farr, and a return bout between Baer and Louis would draw almost as much as a second match between Joe and Schmeling."

Only yesterday Mike hinted that "scrambled conditions" in Germany might prevent Max coming over to

New York Senate Adopts Resolution For Pari-Mutuels

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (U.P.).—The New York Senate tonight adopted a concurrent resolution proposing a constitutional amendment which would legalize pari-mutuel betting at race tracks.

The vote was 33 to 14.

The proposal, introduced by Senate Democratic Leader John J. Dunnigan, Bronx, was sent to the Assembly for concurrence.

To become law, the concurrent resolution would have to be repassed by the 1939 Legislature and then approved by the voters.

Trade Talk
Happy Days!

All Nats Seem Glad After Deal.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, March 18.—It will help both clubs.

That was the unanimous opinion among baseball men today after announcement of the Joe Kuhel-Zeke Bonura trade by the Nats and White Sox.

The Chicago club, which gave up Bonura, was top-heavy with right-handed hitters. With Bonura, the Sox's entire infield would have been right-handed, and the club already boasted a right-handed hitting catcher and two right-handed outfielders.

Contrastingly, the Nats were in need of right-handed hitting power. The Washington club's entire infield, before the trade, was left-handed, as were two regular outfielders.

When Zeke Bonura steps onto the diamond at Griffith Stadium on April 18 in the opening game of the season, the Washington club will be boasting a right-handed hitting, right-handed throwing first baseman for the first time in 23 years.

Not since Chick Gandil last held the job in 1915 have the Nats possessed other than a left-handed individual at first base. Joe Judge, who succeeded Gandil in 1916, held the position for 14 years. In 1930, left-handed Joe Kuhel came along to oust Judge from the job.

The pleasure with which the Washington ball club greeted the announcement that big Zeke Bonura would join the Nats was not unanimous. Young Jimmy Wasdell could work up no enthusiasm.

"I guess that finishes me with Washington," said the young first baseman. "I had a chance of beating Kuhel out of the job and I think I'd have done it. But with Bonura here, I won't get a tumble."

Wasdell is in a mood to demand that the Nats trade him to another club. He consented to go to Chattanoga last spring on the promise that he would be given a fair chance to beat Kuhel for the first base job, but now finds that the odds are heavily against him with Bonura replacing Kuhel.

"I know there are two National League clubs who want me," said Wasdell. "The Giants are one of them. Perhaps I'll ask Mr. Griffith to give me permission to make a deal for myself."

Manager Harris, who has developed a fondness for the fiery young rookie, declared, however, that Wasdell would be retained. "Other clubs have carried two first basemen. We hope to be able to do it. I wouldn't want to see Wasdell get away from us. He's only 21."

Ross Denies He's a Bully; Won't Have Edge Over Armstrong

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 18.—World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross is irked at being called a big bully who picks on little guys, like Henry Armstrong, king of the featherweights.

Ever since he agreed to let Armstrong fire punches at his 147-pound title late in May, in New York, Ross has been busy convincing people he won't be taking advantage of a fellow nowhere near his size.

He points out that even during his long layoffs he never has blown up to his division limit, 147 pounds. Further, he doubts if Armstrong could come close to making the featherweight standard of 126 pounds without starving himself to death.

"Actually," Ross argued today after his workout," I'm not picking on a guy two weight classes below me, I probably won't weigh over 141 pounds for Armstrong. He likely will build up to 136.

"Instead of a welterweight and a featherweight in there it really will be a fight between a big lightweight—me—and a little lightweight—Armstrong. And, speaking of giving away weight, I don't remember anyone sympathizing with me when I fought Billy Petrolle and Jimmy McLarnin."

Money, a nice chunk of it, lured Barney and Co-Manager Sam Pian into receding from their stand that neither Armstrong nor Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers would get a crack at the welter crown without first licking its stablemate, Davey Day.

"We meant what we said about getting Davey his chance," Ross insisted, "but Pian saw where the Armstrong fight should draw around $300,000. A gate that size would mean a lot to me, a newly-married man—and I haven't had a payday since last September."

Ross, who scaled 144 pounds after today's exercises, will meet Henry Schaft, of Minneapolis, April 4 at Minneapolis, in the first of two or three non-title warm-ups before risking his title against Armstrong's savage, heavy punching attack.

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, March 18.—It's taps for the little "champagne girl" who touched off one of the biggest explosions in sports by trying to mix water and wine:

Eleanor Holm Jarrett, a petite brown-haired gal in a black georgette evening gown, sat on the edge of an apple-green divan and looked at me expectantly with those big brown eyes.

I glanced searchingly about the living room of her apartment and inquired, "Where are the bottles?" My voice registered disappointment.

"What bottles?"

"Why—the champaigne bottles, of course. I thought you lived on champaigne. I thought you trained on the bubbly water and that was what made you world champion woman back stroke swimmer."

Eleanor threw back her head and laughed heartily, displaying that famous mouthful of white teeth which you noticed, no doubt, in the newspaper shots when she was kicked off the Olympic team just before the 1936 games in Berlin. Remember? The Olympic brass hats insinuated that Eleanor mistook champagne for water during the voyage to Germany.

* * * *

You may have noticed those same pearly teeth in the public prints last summer when the press indicated that Eleanor was splitting with her band leader husband, Art Jarrett, so that she could marry Billy Rose, the showman. Rose, it appeared, was preparing to break away from Fanny

ELEANOR HOLM.

Brice, his wife. Or you may have seen the ivory more recently in the movie "Tarzan's Revenge," co-starring Eleanor and Glen Morris, decathlon champion.

Anyway, the glamour girl laughed heartily at my remark about the bottles.

"Silly! I haven't had a drink in a year and a half," she said. "And I'm in the best condition ever. Gee, I wish I could regain my amateur standing. I'd give the girls some real marks to shoot at. You know I hadn't reached my peak when they threw me off the Olympic team.

* * * *

"Why—only last summer, when I was swimming with Johnny Weismuller at the Cleveland Exposition, friends clocked me over the 100 meters consistently around 1:11 or 1:12. And you know the women's backstroke record for that distance is 1:13.6. But I guess there's no chance of me becoming an amateur again. I don't figure I've got a prayer. Jesse Owens tried to get back and couldn't. I guess it's taps for me."

What did she mean by "taps?"

"I mean tap dancing. I'm taking lessons. I'd like to become a musical comedy star. I can sing—did it for two years with Art's band. But you've just got to dance to make good in musical comedy."

Mention of Art's band reminded me to ask, "What's the present status of your differences with Jarrett?"

Eleanor gave her brown hair a nervous pat, and the big diamond bracelet on her left wrist glittered blindingly.

"Art and I are getting divorced," she said. "He'll get the interlocutory decree on April 1."

* * * *

Then, I presumed, she would be free to marry Billy Rose, currently operating the "Casa Manana." No—she couldn't marry anyone for a year after April 1. But she did intend to marry Rose, didn't she?

"Let's not talk about that," she interrupted. "There's been too much about us in the papers already. Besides, a year is a long time. And anything can happen meanwhile. Just consider me a career girl who's trying to make good on the stage. No—I won't join the "Casa Manana" show after I learn to dance. People would say I was working there because of Billy's influence. I want to make good on my own ability."

No Sir Wins Photo Decision at Tropical In Speedy Feature

Gyral Loses by Nose With Dnieper Third and Six Lengths Behind Battling Pair; Dead Heat Marks Day's Third Race.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 18.—In one of the most bitterly contested stretch duels of the season, Mary Hirsch's No Sir was awarded the photo decision over T. D. Buhl's Gyral in the Key West purs eof a mile and a sixteenth here today. Mose Goldblatt's Dnieper was third, six lengths behind. No Sir, an even money favorite, covered the distance in 1:43 4-5, fastest time of the meeting and only four-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

There was considerable doubt as to the official result until the red board was flashed. There was the delay until the photo's evidence was available, as well as a full claim lodged by Ken McCombs, Gyral's rider, against Arcaro on No Sir. No Sir, on the outside, appeared to be carried wide by Gyral turning for home and the two horses were lapped in a desperate duel.

When No Sir's number showed, loud booing filled the air. A large majority of the onlookers thought Gyral's head had dropped down in front right on the wire. Press box chartmakers called @yral the winner, as he appeared to get the "nod," but it was very close.

Nor Sir, Gyral and Rushaway are named for the $10,000 added, 1 1-16 miles Tropical Handicap to be decided here closing day.

Rushaway lived up to his name by stealing out to an early lead of two lengths. He held it along the back stretch, but was collared by Gyral near the far turn. The latter drew away to a length advantage midway of the bend. No Sir was sent up fast on the outside of Gyral and drew up to virtually even terms as the pair drove into the home lane.

Long shots monopolized the spotlight with the running of the opening event, a 5½-furlong test for maiden 3-year-olds. Bess B., soundly beaten in her Hialeah races, woke up to take the purse by a half length from Temple Fall, with Hindu Princess beaten another half length for second money. Temple Fall made the running into the stretch, where the fast-closing Bess B. wore down the pacemaker to score going away. The filly's rider, W. Cornay, just got in from New Orleans and lost no time making his presence felt. The winner returned $34.80. The heavily backed Rock High tired chasing the early pace.

The first dead heat of the meeting developed in the third race. Die Hard and Stavka reached the wire on even terms in the photo finish, with the latter on the outside of his rival. Beaver Lake was a fast closing third, a half length behind. Die Hard ran over the early leaders, Regula Baddun and Gayette, before reaching the stretch. He held on well when Stavka, creeping up slowly but surely, loomed in the last furlong. Die Hard paid $5.30, $5.60 and $5 across the board in the split pool, while Stavka returned $8.20, $13 and $7.80.

BESS B., prominent and rated off the leaders until straightened into the stretch, moved up with determination when called upon, wore TEMPLE FALL down through the stretch and won going away. TEMPLE FALL held his opposition for speed, raced ROCK HIGH into defeat in the early stages, drew out on the stretch turn, but was unable to stave off the winner's challenge. HINDU PRINCESS, slow to get going, closed a big gap and finished strongest of all. JULIUS CAESAR finished stoutly, but never threatened the leaders.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOSILDA, $7.60, $3.90, $3.20; ROBERT S., $4.50, $3.30; MISS CHICRO, $4.00.

FLOSILDA, going well up on the outside under slight restraint, responded courageously when placed to a drive and outlasted ROBERT S. when the real test came. ROBERT S., a keen contender all the way, made a bold effort when straightened into the stretch and assumed a short lead; but then faltered right at the end. MISS CHICRO, in the thick of contention from the start, moved to the front midway around the turn, but then was unable to keep stride with the leaders in the stretch run. BLUE CYCLONE, well up on the extreme outside all the way, held on stoutly in the stretch drive. ETHEL'S CHOICE finished with a belated rush.

Daily Double, Bess B. and Flosilda, Paid $134.70.

DIE HARD, going in close pursuit of the leaders all the way, drew out at the furlong pole, but then faltered and lasted long enough to dead heat STAVKA. The latter gradually bettered his position on the outside in the final quarter mile and would have won a clear victory in another stride. BEAVER LAKE, in tight quarters until leaving the backstretch, came to the outside in the last three furlongs and closed with a rush. EXHORT suffered repeated minor interference and was in close quarters in the stretch turn.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:49. Off 3:50. Winner, Paragon Stable's br. c. (2), by Kiev—Memories II. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ISKIE, $5.20, $4.10, $2.70; EASTER THORN, $6.00, $3.10; ALL SPADES, $2.60.

ISKIE, away forwardly, went in close attendance of the leader rounding the turn, responded gamely to a strong hand ride when the final issue came and held EASTER THORN safe at the end. The latter, on the outside, closed gamely, but was unable to overhaul the winner. ALL SPADES, quickest to begin, displayed the most speed, but faltered in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:17. Off 4:18. Winner, Mary Hirsch's b. or br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NO SIR, $4.00, $2.90, $2.20; GYRAL, $6.40, $2.70; DNIEPER, $2.50.

NO SIR, quickest to begin, was eased off the pace rounding the first turn, followed the leader under slight restraint until approaching the quarter-mile pole, where he moved up gamely on the outside, but was carried out entering the stretch, continued with determination and got up in the last stride. GYRAL, nearest in pursuit of the leader, raced RUSHAWAY into defeat rounding the turn, drew clear and made a courageous effort when challenged, but could not withstand the winner's bid. DNIEPER finished stoutly and easily disposed of RUSHAWAY in the stretch run. RUSHAWAY set a fast pace for six furlongs and then retired. PRINCE SADOR had no excuse.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:48. Off 4:52½. Winner, Mrs. C. Crane's dk. b. h. LADFIELD began alertly, went closer up than usual in the early running, and moved up boldly on the outside entering the stretch, shook off SAUNDERSTOWN and had enough in reserve to withstand PUNDIT'S bid. The latter, a trailer the first half mile, moved up rapidly thereafter on the extreme outside and closed with a belated rush. TEDDY BEAU, on the inside and saving ground the entire trip, made a game bid through the stretch, but was unable to get up. SAUNDERSTOWN, rushed to the front and used up racing NAUGHTY into defeat, weakened in the stretch run. SAY WHEN held on well in the final drive.

A.A.U. Bouts Tonight Due To Fill Arena

Program of 20 Fights Is Carded; First Scrap at 7:30 o'Clock.

Attracted by the bargain-boxing bill scheduled, and hopeful of witnessing the same type of competition that marked the initial show, a capacity audience is expected to jam Turner's Arena tonight for the quarter-final round of the annual District A. A. U. ring tournament.

Twenty bouts, involving gladiators ranging in size from bantams to middleweights are on the program, and action should be at a lively tempo. Fighting will be continuous after the first bout, which is scheduled at 7:30 o'clock.

First scrap on the program involves Lou Gevinson's younger brother, Harry, a 118-pounder, who meets Buddy Yocum, of the Merrick Boys Club. This will be Gevinson's first tournament appearance since he won the Silver Gloves lightweight championship three years ago, and he looms as a potential champion. Yocum was awarded a forfeit in the first round.

Another bout of interest involves Eddie Kane, Washington Boys Club featherweight, and O. V. Crider, of Fort Belvoir. Both scored upsets in their initial tourney appearances, Crider eliminating the highly touted Jimmy Koustenas.

Up in the heavier middleweight ranks the outstanding bout appears to be between Ralph Harris, Fort Belvoir, and Jack White, Police Boys Club southpaw. Harris packs a dangerous punch and scored with the fans by ousting Joe Savoy, of Fort Myer, in the preliminary round, but should have his hands fully occupied with White.

Other well-known amateur names listed are Carroll Wright, Police Boys Club; Joe Denman and Jim Perrow, National Guardsmen, and Angelo Pappas, of the Washington Boys Club.

Semifinals are scheduled Wednesday night at the Arena, title bouts scheduled the following Saturday at the same site. Champions will receive from the boxing commission a bathrobe of light green material, trimmed in dark green, with the inscription, "Amateur Champion, D. C. Boxing Commission," inscribed on the back.

Gold medals, with blue ribbons, inscribed "Amateur Champion, D. C. Boxing Commission," also will be presented to the 12 junior champions, while silver medals, with red ribbons, will go to the losing finalists. The boxing law, originally drafted only for amateurs, permits the commission to make expenditures for the encouragement of "amateur" boxing.

—New Nats, No. 6—

Taft Wright

Destined to Stay on as Pinch-Hitter.

This fellow with the two last names was a sensation in the Nats' training camp this season, even before he donned a glove . . . Because he was almost unrecognizable as the 212-pounder who reported to Washington in the spring of 1937 . . . Somewhere during the past year he had shed 25 pounds and weighed in as a 187-pounder . . . Born during Taft's administration and that's why they tagged him with that name . . . In the off-season, he's at home at Lumberton, N. C. . . . Hunting, fishing and "messin' round," as he says . . . Came off the Carolina sandlots to sign with Charlotte in 1933 and celebrated his debut by whacking out five hits in five times at bat . . . His last swipe being a home run with the bases full, no less . . . Bought by Atlanta in 1934, he starred against the Nats in a spring exhibition game and first excited the interest of Bucky Harris then . . . When Joe Cambria, Albany clubowner, had a chance to trade Davis Harris to Atlanta for Wright and $5,000, Harris advised Cambria to make the deal . . . Thus Wright came into the Washington system . . . Has been a star with Chattanooga for two years, leading the league in everything akin to batting in 1937 until he pulled a muscle in his thigh on July 3 and was forced out of action . . . He's the shortest fellow on the Washington club . . . Five feet nine inches . . . But his compact frame bespeaks power . . . Facially, he looks more like Walter Haight than anybody else . . . Has always been tabbed by the Washington club for future reference . . . Was dropped off at Chattanooga demanded him as a prime pennant asset . . . Hits left handed and throws right . . . Registered the longest wallop ever recorded at Tinker Field in Orlando the other day when he hit a three-bagger against the right field fence on a short hop—with the bases full . . . fill his engagement with Louis, but Joe Jacobs gave the laugh to this.

"Max will be here on time," he said. "He has set his head on being the first man to win the heavyweight title twice and he means it. I can't see where conditions in Germany have anything to do with his coming or not coming.

"We'll go to Speculator, N. Y., to train. Max will sail for New York immediately after his fight with Steve Dudas April 26. I'm going over for that one and the chances are we'll come back together."

With Chicago, New York and Detroit definitely in the running for the June Brawl, and Philadelphia mildly interested, betting here tonight was the fight will wind up in the Yankee Stadium, where Mike Jacobs has staged most of his important outdoor shows. Mike intimated he would announce the location within two weeks.

Schmeling now is getting ready for his tune-up with Dudas. Louis is open for another fight before he meets Schmeling, but right now there is no opponent in sight. Gunnar Barlund, the Finn, who stopped Buddy Baer, is the logical man but his manager, Paul Damski, doesn't want to rush the youngster, and would rather take on Tommy Farr before sending Barlund against the champion.

Bellman Cagers Win.

The Bellman Heating Co. basketball team defeated the Treasury cagers yesterday, 22 to 20, in a game played in the Roosevelt High gymnasium. This marked the seventeenth victory in 29 games for the Bellman team.

The Washington Lacross Club team will practice this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the American University field. Gus Welch, who is handling the team, wants all players to report promptly. The roster lists 35 former collegiate stars.

Table Tennis Stars to Vie

Tonight at the Washington Table Tennis Courts, 1305 E street northwest, the city's best junior table tennis players, 16 years of age and under, will vie for the title in the Junior Table Tennis Tournament sponsored by the Washington Table Tennis Courts and sanctioned by the D. C. Table Tennis Association. Entries will be accepted until 3 p. m.

Fred Mizell, present titleholder, must vacate it because he is over the age limit. Leading the contenders for his title is 14-year-old Irvin Markowitz, Jefferrson High School lad, who recently defeated Bernie Applebaum, University of Maryland star, at one of the Washington Boys Club's tournaments.

Another player who will bear watching is little Buddy Williams, young veteran of table tennis tournaments in Washington, who participated in the last city men's tourney and in the Easterns. Russ Mizell, brother of last year's champ, and Jack Skinner are others who stand a good chance of reaching the final rounds.

Play will begin at 6:30 p. m. and both singles and doubles will be played through early rounds; late rounds being played Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and the finals at 7:30.

Nats' Bosses Laud Trade

ting .302 in '34, zoomed to .330 in '36 and last year whacked at his impressive .345 rate.

There isn't much doubt where Bonura will bat in the Washington hitting order. He will hit in the cleanup role, as befits the owner of an average such as his. The Washington park with its leftfield fence does not figure to bother Bonura, who is a line-drive hitter.

Bonura's presence with the Nats figures to inject the long-needed right-handed hitting punch and it is certain to inject a large gob of color into the Washington club, which has need also of that commodity.

"Bananas" Bonura is his name around the league, drawn from the twin facts that he is in the fruit business with his father at New Orleans and shouts in the manner of a huckster when he is playing baseball.

Clark Griffith, who has always had a fondness for acquiring baseball showmen, hasn't hurt his reputation any in the Bonura deal. The loud Italian takes command of the infield, yells advice to all concerned and makes a play for the friendship of the customers. He is destined to be the rightfield fans' hottest favorite since Sam Rice moved out of Griffith Stadium.

Kuhel was a $65,000 purchase when the Nats acquired him from Kansas City in 1930, but the Cleveland Indians picked up Bonura for the taking back in 1929. Zeke who will be 30 in September was farmed to the New Orleans club and was a batting sensation from the start. He hit .322 in 1930 and .352 in 1931. The following season he batted .375.

Chicago acquired him from Cleveland in 1932 and sent him to Dallas where he batted .322 and .375 for two years. The White Sox called him in 1934 and then had no more first base worries.

Orlando, Fla., March 18.—The Nats will attempt to make it two straight victories in the Grapefruit League tomorrow when they journey to nearby Haines City to meet the Kansas City Blues, of the American Association.

PWA Wins.

PWA basketeers defeated the Greenbelt A. C. quintet, 31-26, last night on the Greenbelt court. "Swisher" Schwartz and Don Sidwell, of the Colorado basketball team, officiated.

Senate Five Wins Debut In Tourney

Treasury Is Team Defeated, 37-23, by Fast-Stepping Club.

lanky youngster was a deadly scoring machine in the first half when his mates couldn't have hit the backboard with a firehose.

But Mr. Burns, perhaps belatedly celebrating St. Patrick's Day, pumped through baskets from the floor and also under the basket to personally score 10 of the first 11 points credited the Beermen. He made the cords dance three successive times from near midcourt during one stretch. Meanwhile George Olsen was keeping Treasury in the game by firing through one-handed pivot shots.

Senate led only 19-18 at the outset of the second half but class eventually was the telling factor.

Regal, with players from Tech, Roosevelt, Central and Gonzaga, working with surprising co-ordination, made an impressive debut in defeating the Flatfeet. Hymie Perlo, who learns his 3 R's at Roosevelt, and Tom Hanley, former Gonzaga Prep player, teamed well with George Zuras, of Tech, in leading the attack.

Roosevelt C. C. B. C., featuring George West, Roosevelt All-High forward selection, and his teammate, Doyle Royal, looked equally as effective in swamping Browdy. West, who lapped the court fully 15 minutes before the game so as to make the required poundage, scored 8 points but yielded honors to Royal, who played twice as long and made 15.

Merrick's triumph over Mount Vernon was the handiwork of Joe Heddings, who flipped in a basket and three out of three free throws to clinch the decision. Trailing, 32 to 26, Heddings dropped in two charity heaves, and a moment later reduced the margin to 1 point, as he rammed in a snowbird and added a foul shot on the same play. It was then that Mike Dentona, who had played a comparatively insignificant role in the game to date, raced down the sidelines and dropped in a wild one-hander to win the game.

There are no more games in the tournament until Monday, when the scene of action shifts to Roosevelt Gym.

Cunningham Beats Venzke in ¾ Mile

Elizabeth, N. J., March 18 (U.P.).—Glenn Cunningham again vanquished two of his most persistent rivals when he beat Gene Venzke and Archie San Romani in a special ¾-mile race at the New Jersey A. A. U. track championships tonight.

The transplanted Kansan, running under the New York Curb Exchange A. A. Colors, was timed in 3:10.9 to beat out Venzke by two yards. San Romani, also of Kansas, was third, 15 yards further back.

Wheat Jumps With Polish War Alarm

Rain and Snow in Kansas Offset Maximum Price Gains.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 18.—In flurried buying rushes, the Chicago wheat market ran up again today, almost 2 cents a bushel at times.

Reports that Polish troops were marching toward the Lithuanian border, and that Germany would seize Memel the moment Polish forces crossed into Lithuania, served as particular incitements for speculative purchasing of wheat.

Late advices of rains and snowfalls in Kansas, however, together with relative smallness of export buying of United States wheat today, only 200,000 to 300,000 bushels, were a handicap to friends of higher prices.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝@1⅛ cents above yesterday's finish, May 88@88⅛, July 85¼@85¾, corn ½ to 1 cent advanced, May 60@60⅛, July 61⅝@61¾, oats ⅛@½ up, rye showing ½ to 1 cent bulge, and provisions varying from 5 cents drop to a gain of 2 cents.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 18.—Stock prices displayed a firm tone and quotations were generally higher, although slightly off from the best of the day at the finish. Industrial securities advanced, especially rayon, tobacco, steels and the shipping groups. Rubbers moved upward following the Dunlop dividend announcement and home rails showed improvement. British funds, oils and mining issues were active and German bonds gained about 2 points.

Paris.—The bourse closed with a mixed tone and the industrial section was off slightly from Thursday's finals. Rentes finished 90 centimes lower to 60 up and Royal Dutch gained 128 francs. Suez Canal lost 245 francs of yesterday's advance.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures advanced ⅝d to 1d following the firmness at Winnipeg and Chicago today. The unfavorable European situation was also a factor. The cotton market reacted in sympathy with lower Bombay prices, coupled with scattered liquidation and hedging and final prices were off 4 to 5 points.

Foreign selling was in evidence during the greater part of the day. Chesapeake's President Mum On Resignation

Bradley Declines Comment on Chairman Young's Request That He Quit.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, March 18.—Charles L. Bradley, president of Chesapeake Corporation, declined comment today on a proposal by Robert R. Young, Chesapeake chairman, that Guaranty Trust Co. name a fifth man to the railroad holding company's directorate to break a deadlock.

Young has asked Bradley and another director, John P. Murphy, to resign because of differences over management, and has submitted a list of 12 names to the Guaranty Trust Co. The New York bank under certain circumstances may have the right to vote 71 per cent of Chesapeake stock which it holds as collateral against Alleghany Corporation bond issues.

Bradley, a Cleveland financier who was in Phoenix, Ariz., today, said any comment must come from associates. Murphy stated neither he nor Bradley would solicit proxies for a Chesapeake corporation stockholders' meeting Bradley has called for April 4.

Chesapeake Corporation stock, which reached a high of $48.50 on the New York Stock Exchange March 2, sold today as low as $34, and was off $3.25 for the day in a generally weak rail market.

A vacancy has existed on Chesapeake Corporation's board since the resignation of Frank F. Kolbe. The fourth member of the board as now constituted is Allan P. Kirby, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Young, Kirby and Kolbe last year obtained at least nominal control of Alleghany Corporation, giant Van Sweringen holding company which descends through Chesapeake Corporation to profitable Chesapeake & Ohio Railway and its subsidiaries.

U. S. Settles Claims Against Kreuger Estate

The Government settled income tax claims totaling $3,456,770 against the estate of the late Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, records of the Tax Appeals Board disclosed yesterday.

The board did not state the amount of the stipulated payments but said the "Commissioner of Internal Revenue had accepted a sum in settlement."

New Financing.

New York, March 18 (AP).—New financing this week totaled $19,094,363, compared with $7,334,018 the previous week, and $43,107,550 in the corresponding period a year ago, a compilation of Poor's Publishing Co., showed today. Municipal issues amounted to $18,299,900, compared to $14,688,500 for the period last year, and $5,074,500 last week.

Stocks Break to New Lows in Heavier Dealings as War Comes Nearer; Wheat Higher.

New York, March 18.—Financial markets fell increasingly under the influence of the approaching wars in Europe and weakened by their own diseases of a domestic nature fell sharply in a day of increased activity. On sales volume of 1,600,000 shares, the third largest of the year, prices broke to new low levels for the year, or, in the case of rails, to the worst since 1932. United States Government bonds, although supported by official buying, were heavy. Sterling and francs fell. Cotton declined, but wheat rallied. May futures rose 1⅛ cents a bushel to 88⅛ cents.

This was one of those days of which it could be said that the markets spoke for themselves. Prices for the best grade of bonds, for the medium classes and for the worst of the lot went down without much hindrance. Stocks acted in the same manner. Opening prices for stocks gave promise of at least a temporary halt in the weakness that is causing more distress as it goes along, not only to the pocketbooks of investors but to the business man generally who can't help but see in the decline a forecast of future hard times for industry. As the trading wore on the resistance to selling weakened in measure to the fading of opposition to the advance of the spirit of slaughter and aggression in Europe.

The dull trading in stocks that predominated was broken on three occasions by a flurry of activity which cut prices sharply. The first selling wave swept over the market shortly before 11 o'clock and while it lasted the ticker fell four minutes behind in its reporting job. The next sinking spell came during the noon hour and was less violent, but it left the market considerably weaker. Stock prices reached the point at which margin calling developed and a good deal of distress selling took place promoting the third sinking spell in the last hour.

Short Covering.

When the third selling drive hit the market stocks were wobbly and probably would have broken more sharply had it not been for the short covering which came to their aid. Short selling today was reported to have been fairly lively at times. At any rate, the desire to get out of stocks, combined with forced liquidation and short selling, was more pronounced than it has been at any time this year.

Steel held stubbornly at 50 during most of the morning trade. It clung to 49 for a while in early afternoon and then dropped below that figure in setting a new low for the year. Most of the industrial leaders sold at new low prices for the year or longer in falling from 2 to 6 points, but the worst performance was given by the railroad shares. Investors apparently expected no help from the Government, in view of the President's hints on wages, and at any rate, the general business outlook was far from encouraging. Railroad stocks settled down to the worst prices seen in five years.

Telephone sold at the lowest price since 1935, when it broke par. Manville, Westinghouse, Case, Lima Locomotive, Allied Chemical, Philip Morris, Paraffine, Smelters and American Brake Shoe were shoved down 4 points or more without much difficulty. Some preferred stocks fell heavily. Gold shares on the home front were a shade firmer, except Homestake, which gave up 2 or 3 points more.

In the Air.

There must be something in the atmosphere of the Capital City, on the Potomac, which acts as a strange drug on men's minds, especially on questions of economics and finance. John W. Hanes, formerly connected with a Wall Street brokerage firm and now a member of the SEC, used to have a reputation for sound ideas. No sooner had he joined the SEC than he took on the same colors as the other New Dealers. His latest address to investment bankers might have been written by the same man who prepares the other New Deal sermons. It cautions the banks that, if they don't get busy and supply capital to recumbent industry, the Government will take over the job. How the investment bankers would love to supply capital and how industry would love to use it—if only the Government would stop beating them to death and let them have a little food. Mr. Hanes is just as silent as the rest of them on the question of when the Government proposes to allow business another breathing spell and to reopen the capital market with repeal of certain tax and banking laws.

Mergers.

The fall in railroad shares has brought about some unfamiliar relationships. For many years it was the habit of Great Northern to sell a few points higher than Northern Pacific, but now Great Northern is given a market value of more than double that of its blood cousin. Years ago when mergers were proposed an argument arose over the question of a share for share exchange. Now the Northern Pacific holders probably would be satisfied with a two for one exchange. The roads no doubt would merge soon enough if they were assured of inclusion of the wholly owned Burlington in the consolidated system. The Government, which now threatens compulsory mergers, broke up the Northern Pacific-Great Northern marriage a few years ago by insisting that the Burlington be torn away and put into another system.

Chesapeake.

A good deal of poppycock is appearing on the squabble between the Young-Kirby interest in Alleghany and the Guaranty Trust over a question of the duty of a trustee. The attempt is made to paint a picture of a great fight for control of the Van Sweringen roads taking place between the embattled brokers, on the one side, and J. P. Morgan & Co. on the other. Actually it is somewhat simpler than that; it is a question of where the duty of a bond trustee lies. The Guaranty Trust happens to be the trustee for the Alleghany bonds, which are short on collateral, and which therefore obliges the trustee to look after the interests of Alleghany bondholders.

Foreign Currencies Hit Lows for Year

New York, March 18 (AP).—New fears for the peace of Europe sent another wave of European funds hurrying to the safety of the dollar today. Despite reports of considerable support by the official control, the pound sterling dropped 1⅝ cents to a fresh low mark for the year. The French franc lost .02 of a cent and the Swiss franc .06 of a cent. The belga dipped .00½ of a cent.

The Holland guilder, recently a target for heavy selling, slumped .18 of a cent, another low for the year.

Life Insurance Benefits Cited By Dr. Huebner

Family Not Beneficiaries but Heirs, Teacher Tells Underwriters.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Wives and children are not the beneficiaries of life insurance policies but the heirs of life insurance estates, Dr. S. S. Huebner, Philadelphia, an outstanding authority on insurance education, revealed last night, in an address at the annual banquet of the District of Columbia Chapter, Chartered Life Underwriters, at the Carlton Hotel.

Speaking before more than 150 members and guests at the meeting marking the eleventh anniversary of the founding of the American College of Life Underwriting, Dr. Huebner, a founder and now president of that institution, emphasized it is the policyholder himself who is the beneficiary and that benefits of life insurance ownership follow him from purchase of the first policy until receipt of annuity income.

Thorough familiarity with every phase of insurance enabled the speaker, just completing 25 years as chairman of the department of insurance, Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, to show how a man's life insurance contracts come into his service at all stages of his life.

He also gave a very clear exposition of the investment phase of insurance, discussing at length the qualities of all investments, because he is an economist as well as a student of insurance. His analysis of life and property values gave a new light on the subject of investment in human life as well as property.

Thrift Habits.

Thrift-building habits created by ownership of life insurance, Dr. Huebner regards as distinct benefits to the policyholder. He reminded that the steady growth of cash reserves in policies provides a depreciation fund and a sinking fund for the exclusive use of the policyholder when he is ready to employ it anywhere along the course of life. And, in the end, he concluded, every policy can be a last will and testament, directing the administration of the estate it has enabled the owner to create.

Greetings were extended by Paul D. Sleeper, president of the chapter, and the Rev. Allen A. Stockdale, and music was furnished by W. Ed Whitesell, accordionist, and Henry C. Nestor, vocalist, accompanied at the piano by Richard Kooms.

Bob Burns Says—

It's always been pretty generally conceded that actors and musicians don't have much practical knowledge of other things, but I have a friend who's an orchestra leader.

Durin' the recent storm, his backyard was washed full of gullies and he got a crew of men back there to shovel it in shape again. He said he noticed the work was movin' pretty slow and he found that one of the fellas was whistlin' "Thanks for the Memory" and all the others were shovelin' in time with the music.

Then the orchestra leader opened his windows wide, turned his phonograph up loud and put on a record "Whistle While You Work" and he says ever since then the dirt's jest been flyin'.

Ex-Envoy Talks Tomorrow on Church in Spain

Laughlin's Speech Will Be One of Covenant Open Parish Series.

Irving Laughlin, former Ambassador to Greece and Spain, will speak on "Religion and Spain" at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the National Open Parish at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Connecticut avenue and N street northwest.

The speech is one of a series initiated by Dr. John Carruthers, visiting minister at the church, in the interest of a national movement to introduce more religion into world affairs.

At the Cosmos Club yesterday, Dr. Carruthers explained to newspapermen the purposes of the open parish. He said:

"Cotton Mather 250 years ago write a book telling how the United States was unique for being a nation on a continental scale dedicated to Christian principles. I am hoping that there can be a return to those principles.

Culbertson Chairman.

"In the huge humanitarian efforts of the Government there is need for more religion. It is sound Americanism for Jews, Catholics and Protestants to conduct, for example, a series of open parishes from the White House over Nation-wide radio hookups at Easter time.

"It is time to reinvigorate our patriotism by proper dedication to Christian principles."

Dr. William S. Culbertson, former Ambassador to Chile and Minister to Rumania, will be chairman of the open parish series. Invitation to the speaker was issued by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, minister of the church and chairman of the Committee of Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

McGroarty to Speak.

Representative John Steven McGroarty, poet laureate of California, one of the six holders of Knighthood in the Order of Isabella the Catholic, will also speak on "God Drew a Circle Around Me."

"The Nation's Capitol hasn't used its national church power sufficiently," Dr. Carruthers said. "We have federations here, but they need more force. We need to spend money for intellectual research in world welfare and religion."

Next Sunday former Ambassador William Dodd will be the speaker. The Wooster Glee Club will sing April 3 when there will be tribute to Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra.

On April 10 former Ambassador Culbertson will speak on the Greek Church in Rumania. The series will close April 24 when Dr. Charles R. Erdman, chairman of the Board of Foreign Mission of the Presbyterian Church, will speak on "Are Missions Effective Today."

Contract Bridge

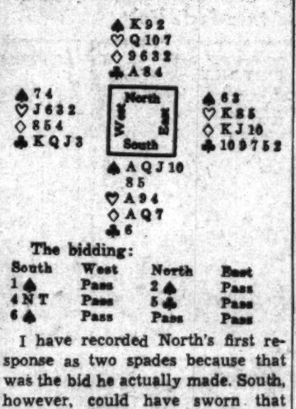
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

A Remunerative Lisp.

A certain New York foursome that plays regularly each week includes a man who has had to take quite a lot of kidding all his life because of a pronounced lisp. After the hand described below occurred, however, it was his turn to laugh, because that same lisp was directly responsible for an astonishing result—a result that was gratifying to himself and partner as it was discomfiting to his opponents.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

I have recorded North's first response as two spades because that was the bid he actually made. South, however, could have sworn that North said "three spades," and of course South's subsequent bidding proved that he was depending on North for considerable strength. North, blissfully unaware of partner's misunderstanding, kept the ball rolling, with the result that a slam contract, which had about one chance in a hundred of succeeding, was reached.

After West had opened the club king and the dummy went down, South demanded in no uncertain terms to be told how North could have given a double raise with such horrible distribution and only two honor-tricks. North protested vehemently that he had not bid three spades over one, and at this stage of the proceeding the declarer heartily cursed North's speech impediment. He could not know that the prankish gods had prepared a rare feast for him.

Winning with the club ace, declarer grimly took the diamond finesse, which held. He then led the queen of spades and overtook with dummy's king, after which he ruffed a club. He next led the spade eight and overtook with the nine. Trumps breaking, he ruffed dummy's last club, then laid down the ace and a low diamond. Not only did this suit break also, but East could not avoid taking the lead, and at this point could make no return that would defeat the contract. Obviously, a club return would have permitted declarer to discard one heart while he ruffed with dummy's spade deuce, then to discard his other losing heart on dummy's thirteenth diamond. The heart return that East actually selected was just as satisfactory to the declarer, who let it ride to the heart queen. The diamond then provided a discard for declarer's other losing heart, and the contract became cold.

Obviously, miraculous breaks were required for declarer to avoid losing two tricks. And as soon as the defenders had recovered their voices they bitterly discussed the advisability of sending North, at their expense, to a doctor who might be able to correct his lisp.

Tax Rise to Ruin D. C. Rum Sale, Dealers Warn

Spokesman Says Increase of 50 Cents Will Drive Buyers to Virginia.

A spokesman for Washington liquor dealers yesterday told the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs that an increase of 50 cents a gallon in the District tax will ruin many local shops by driving buyers into Virginia and Maryland.

Milford F. Schwartz, attorney for the Wholesale Liquor Dealers Association, said that the 739 hard liquor licensees, both on-sale and off-sale, are paying the District a total of $2,250,000 in taxes a year at present.

Doubling of the stamp tax, he said, will "destroy the earning power" of many of the dealers and reduce materially the revenue to the District.

When the sub-committee wrote the liquor tax increase and the $1-a-barrel levy on beer in the revenue bill, Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, predicted that the combined taxes would produce $1,500,000 in additional revenue.

"This extra tax burden," Schwartz said, will encourage the illicit sale of liquor in Washington and thereby aggravate crime."

Virginia, with the State dispensary system, now sells standard brand liquors about 15 per cent under the District price because of lower taxes, and Maryland dealers are slightly under Washington prices.

In 1937, Schwartz said, the District collected $1,156,523 in hard liquor taxes, besides $507,000 in license fees.

Liquor dealers used realty property assessed at $3,750,000 and taxed at $550,000, he added, and furnished employment to some 300 persons.

Blinded by Fog, Autoist Plows Into Deer Herd, Kills 1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Somerset, Pa., March 18.—A spike buck was killed and several bucks and does were believed injured early yesterday when they were struck by a car operated by Dr. E. W. Larson, of Somerset, on the Water Level road.

Dr. Larson was proceeding slowly along the highway, due to a dense fog, and did not see a drove of deer on the road until within a few feet of the animals. A spike buck, weighing 150 pounds, leaped from the road onto the hood of the car and dropped to the road dead as the vehicle crashed into the others.

Dr. Larson and other motorists, armed with searchlights, hunted in the vicinity for half an hour in an effort to locate any of the injured deer, but were unsuccessful.
